Fast, Safe Flying
Visiting the Upper Air
Arrowheads of Gold
Einstein as Second Fiddle

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, FLA., Nov. 22—J. R. Wedell, brilliant young flier who manufactures planes at Paterson, La., flew down here from New York yesterday in 5 hours and 1 minute. He planned a flight in four hours, but forest fires made him lose 170 miles. Five hours and one minute is good time for 1200 miles, fire or no fire.

Mr. Wedell made the flight at the request of Henry L. Doherty, of New York, who has bought the two biggest hotels here, plans, with object lessons, to show how near Miami is to great northern cities.

Pilot Wedell, asked, "When do you think flying will be absolutely safe?" opens his eyes with great surprise: "why it is safe now, the safest travel, safer than railroads or automobiles. The only danger when I fly down here from New York in five hours is after I leave the plane, and get into an automobile."

The first United States attempt to explore the upper atmosphere ended yesterday when Lieut.-Commdr. T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester L. Fordney came down in a New Jersey swamp, after sailing with a gas bag 59,000 feet into the air.

Eleven miles up into the air ocean above our heads is a good first attempt. It is as though some deep-sea fish should swim up a tenth of the mile from the bottom of water five miles deep.

When the two stratosphere fliers reached a point 11 miles above the earth they still had 400 miles to go to reach the thin outside edge of our air ocean.

Some day, perhaps, men will leave our atmosphere entirely, and go on to the moon, or possibly some near planet. But that will not happen soon.

Going about 1000 miles an hour, it would take five years to reach our neighbor, Mars, when it comes "near" us, within 40,000,000 miles.

While prosperity was sitting down, "just around the corner," everybody said hard times were a matter of "psychology." Now Edward Romfh of this city says the value of the dollar and the importance of our big gold reserve are also matters of "psychology." Mr. Romfh is an able banker, his First National went through all the crash and crisis, the "big wind" and everything else undisturbed, while banks were toppling from the Canadian to the Mexican border and from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"Value," says Mr. Romfh, "depends on what you can do with a thing," and tells this story. Spaniards roamed all over Florida, establishing cities, including St. Augustine, the oldest, because they found here Indians using pure gold to make heads for their arrows. They thought Florida must have wonderful gold mines when they found Indians glad to exchange a pound of gold for a pound of copper because the copper made harder arrow heads.

After a while the Spaniards discovered that Florida Indians used gold because Spanish treasure ships on their way home from South American gold mines had been wrecked on Florida coral reefs. The Indians got their gold from those ships.

New York, will give a benefit for Germans of Jewish descent "driven into exile by the Hitler government," with Prof. Einstein, whose property in Germany has just been confiscated, playing the violin.

The learned professor will play a double concert by Bach, as "second fiddle." Something to which he is not accustomed, with the brilliant violinist, Toscha Seidel, as first violin.

Via radio, the ether will carry Einstein's notes out into space, on and on, nobody knows how far. They might never stop going, except that Einstein says the universe is limited, or curves back on itself, or does something to free us from the frightful dilemma of infinite space and endless time.

You wonder with what the professor's notes will come in contact, when they get to the end of the universe. Is there a wall, a fence, or just an empty hole, how far does that hole extend, and what is on the other side of it.

With tickets to the concert at $25, the hall will be crowded. Many would rather hear Einstein play the violin than talk relativity. The violin is easier to understand.

Disorders that included the attacking and stripping of a Norwood girl, firing of a garage and house with a loss of $2000, and a pitched battle between strikers and police who sought to rescue a girl prisoner, featured the fourth day of the strike at the Winslow Bros. and Smith tannery in Norwood.

The victim of the attack was Miss Freda Baldus of Harding st., Norwood, who was accosted by three women in Walpole st. there, while on her way to the tannery.

FIRE SET BY STRIKERS

The fire, police said, was set by striking tannery workers. Five of them are held for questioning at Norwood police headquarters. Flames swept the garage and home of Louis Fifield, Saunders rd.

According to police, three women, who police say were led by Mary Waselunas, jumped from behind a clump of bushes and threw the Baldus girl to the ground, beating her about the face and head and finally tore all her clothing from her body.

CLOTHING TORN OFF

When police arrived in response to a riot call they found Miss Baldus covered with blood and without clothing. When clothing was provided for her she was taken to the vicinity of the tannery and there identified the Waselunas woman as the leader in the assault.

When police seized Miss Waselunas more than 50 other strikers attempted to rescue her and a pitched battle ensued for more than 15 minutes. A second woman who was also identified by Miss Baldus escaped.

Police succeeded in holding the Waselunas woman and she will be in Dedham court on charges of assault and battery. More warrants are out for the rest of the attackers.

CWA Board Orders Way Open for All Idle; Aid for Women

Jobs! Jobs! Jobs!

1—Thousands more go off welfare and onto jobs as officials speed up drive to give 50,000 work by Saturday night.

2—First disorder at Cambridge; 800 rush lines for jobs and police summoned on riot call.

3—Civil Works Board takes up first Boston projects calling for expenditure of nearly $1,500,000 and the making of 4332 jobs.

BULLETIN

The Civil Works Board late today reversed its previous decision and ordered all cities and towns to hold 50 per cent of their prospective jobs open for persons not on the welfare lists. At the same time arrangements were made to open federal re-employment registration offices for women. Labor was told the CWA could grant no special dispensation to union men.

Several thousand more men were taken off Massachusetts municipal welfare lists and hired on real jobs today as the vast program of the Civil Works Administration was speeded up towards a goal of 50,000-jobs-by-Saturday.

The civil works board convened to pass upon projects calling for an expenditure of $3,041,690 and employment of approximately 8000 men in 34 more cities and towns.

O.K. JOBS FOR 8500

The board okayed $972,307 worth of projects to give jobs to 4497 in 18 municipalities yesterday. Projects totaling $1,087,247, as submitted by 13 municipalities and one state department, were passed upon during the emergency session Monday night. These provided for jobs for about 4000.

Projects already filed, either passed upon or awaiting sanction, aggregate $5,001,244, pretty close to half of the $12,00,000 Massachusetts will receive as its share of the federal grant.

Theoretically there are then, about 8500 new workers already employed upon projects aggregating $2,059,554.

Actually, of course, the number is much smaller because of necessary delay in getting the work really going. But those jobs have

Experiments

SPEAKING at Savannah recently President Roosevelt said:

"It has been remarked of late by certain Tories that those who are today in charge of your national government are guilty of great experimentation. If I read my history right, the same suggestion was used when Englishmen, protesting in vain against intolerable conditions at home, founded new colonies in the American wilderness, and when Washingtons and Adamses and Bullocks conducted another great experiment in 1776."

President Roosevelt is right again when he says that when the fathers of this republic founded a new government that was an experiment.

The test of new procedure is not whether or not it is experimental but whether or not it is successful.

The experiment of "Washington and the Adamses" has been successful—enormously successful.

• • •

ON the other hand the experiments of Aaron Burr in 1807 and of Jefferson Davis in 1861 were not so successful and, according to the opinions of all of us today, not so worthy of success.

Still at those times the proponents of revolution and secession and such extreme modifications of establishing American polity doubtless cited the success of the experiment of 1776 as a justification of their own actions.

On the whole, however, it may be set down as a sound general proposition that it is wise not to experiment too much with a successful experiment.

Most experiments fail. Some succeed.

Those which succeed should be dearly cherished and thoughtfully studied in order that we may come to understand fully their merits and enjoy to the utmost their benefits.

• • •

THUS, since the experiment of 1776 has been, despite occasional troubles and problems, such a magnificent success, perhaps we should adhere a little more closely to its basic principles of national and individual liberty, of freedom of thought and speech and publication and action, and to its basic policies of independence and isolation in our relations abroad and of tolerance and reciprocal respect and consideration in our associations at home.

The Hearst papers believe most deeply and sin-

KIDNAP GIRL GIVEN AWAY SOBS FOR MOTHER

Mrs. Patrone Will Go Free; Plans Fight to Reclaim Child

Back into the arms of her foster mother, little Jean Marie Patrone—who is now Jean Marie Nickerson, by adoption—went today, but the four-year-old girl apparently did not care much for her being surrendered.

In fact little Jean Marie, whose mother, Mrs. Eunice Patrone, has spent 12 days in Charles st. jail for refusing to surrender the girl, broke into tears and pulled back when the foster mother, Mrs. Thomas Nickerson of East Boston, extended arms to take her.

Cries of the little girl, for whom police and court officials conducted an unsuccessful search, broke the peace and calm of probate court within a few moments after Judge Arthur W. Dolan had turned her back to Mr. and Mrs. Nickerson and had announced that Mrs. Patrone would now be freed.

MOTHER TO FIGHT

The girl had been brought into court by Mrs. Patrone's counsel, accompanied by the Rev. Fred Benett, pastor of the Union Congregational Church, Columbus ave., South End, and Mrs. Florence Walton, social service worker of the church.

During the brief proceedings, little Jean Marie, wide-eyed, sat on the knee of the minister, who said the girl had been turned over to him this morning by a person he declined to identify.

Through her counsel, Mrs. Patrone, who then remained in jail, served notice that she would keep up her fight to retain her baby, a fight that began in earnest when the natural mother seized up the girl 12 days ago and ran with her from the courtroom after she had been awarded by Judge Dolan to the Nickersons.

COURT WON'T WAVER

Counsel for Mrs. Patrone argued that the adoption of Jean Marie had been obtained through fraud by the Nickersons, who had

According to Brady and Dennis, they purchased $50 worth of bad bills for $15 from a man they met last night in a North End speakeasy and had passed eight of the $10 bills before Dennis was arrested in a North Cambridge drug store.

Federal authorities were notified today and the men were held in bail.

ROOSEVELT PLANS SILVER SCHEME BEFORE CONGRESS MEETS

'SOUND MONEY' MEN LINE UP TO BATTLE GOLD POLICY

Inflationary Congress May Throw Entire Financial Situation Into Sweeping Warfare

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 22—The money question whirled into a seething situation today on three distinct fronts, following the resignation of Dr. O. M. W. Sprague as financial adviser to the Treasury Department.

1. The country appeared headed for an old-fashioned battle, with the so-called "sound money" people and the inflationists choosing up sides and going to it.

Senator Pittman (D., Nev.), in a message to Sir George Schuster, at New Delhi, India, declared President Roosevelt was considering action, even before Congress meets, upon the silver rehabilitation agreement reached at the London economic conference.

Under the Londoon agreement the United States, Canada, Mexico, Peru and Australia proposed, subject to ratification, to absorb 35,000,000 ounces of silver annually into their currencies.

Pittman's message said:

"The President has under consideration action before Congress meets.

"Congress will undoubtedly carry out the agreement. Congratulations."

2. Henry Morganthau, Jr., acting secretary of the treasury, has been called to meet with President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., this week.

The resignation of Prof. Sprague and his tart criticism of the Roosevelt monetary policy, accentuated a situation which has been boiling for weeks.

"I have now reached the conclusion," said Prof. Sprague in his letter to the President, "that there is no defense from a drift into unrestrained inflation other than an aroused and organized public opinion. It is for the purpose of contributing as I may to such a movement that, with feelings of profound disappointment, I sever my connection with your administration."

This was considered the equivalent of an open declaration of war. Those who oppose the Roosevelt gold-purchase experiment now propose to organize and arouse public opinion against it. For his own part, Prof. Sprague plans to conduct a written and spoken campaign of opposition.

That he is assured of considerable support already is evident. The U. S. Chamber of Commerce only last Saturday published a resolution urging the President to return to the gold standard and abandon his present experimenting with the value of the dollar.

That the administration is tightening its lines for the forthcoming battle also is evident. The Treasury has been thoroughly shaken up under the new acting secretary, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and other changes are on the way.

Those out of sympathy with the gold policy, like Dean Acheson and Prof. Sprague, have been retired. New men have been appointed to "key" positions in the Treasury—men who are in sympathy with the President's program. And most significant of all, a rigid censorship has been clamped down under which officials other than Morgenthau himself are forbidden to talk to newspaper men.

Dr. Herman Oliphant, formerly connected with the Farm Credit Administration, which Morgenthau headed, has been transferred to the Treasury as "general counsel" to the secretary. It is a new post.

Earle Bailie, formerly connected with the Seligman banking and brokerage firm in New York, has been appointed "fiscal adviser" to the secretary. It is also a new post.

William H. McReynolds, formerly with the Federal Bureau of Efficiency, has been named "administrative assistant" to the secretary. It is also a new post.

William H. McReynolds, formerly with the Federal Bureau of Efficiency, has been named "administrative assistant" to the secretary.

TREASURY HAS PRESS AGENT

And the Treasury now has a press agent for the first time in history, Herbert E. Gaston, a former New York newspaperman and friend of Morgenthau's, being appointed to that post. Under Morgenthau's orders, gagging subordinate officials in the treasury, all news of treasury activities must emanate from Gaston after approval of Morgenthau.

The changes and the gag-rule were described in one administration quarter as being necessary to stop "sniping" at the administration's monetary policy from within.

Congress is in an inflationary mood, as revealed last spring in the passage of the Thomas amendment reposing vast inflationary power in the President. The powers conferred were discretionary. That is, Mr. Roosevelt could use them or not as he saw fit. Some of them he has used, but the greater part he has not.

The oncoming Congress may make those powers mandatory instead of discretionary. Then there will be a real fight.

Roosevelt Going on With Monetary Policy

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 22 (INS)—President Roosevelt rested and swam today, while official Washington reverberated to the resignation of O. M. W. Sprague, special adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury.

It was made plain that no change of the present monetary policy of the administration was in prospect, and that the executive will have no comment whatever on the Sprague resignation, which was sent to the Secretary of the Treasury—not to the President. Sprague was brought here by William H. Woodin, who recently retired for an indefinite leave. Thus Sprague's resignation was referred to and accepted by the acting secretary, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and is not to come to Mr. Roosevelt at all.

Another matter was brought to the President's attention—the order of Morgenthau imposing a seal of silence on Treasury Department officials. This brought a protest from the Treasury newspaper correspondents in Washington, but it was made plain here the President would not interfere.

Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President, said Mr. Roosevelt was confident Morgenthau did not intend to impose a general press gag.

WOODIN RAPS AT SPRAGUE

New York, Nov. 22 (AP)—Dow Jones & Co., in a published interview with Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin, today quoted the Cabinet official as criticizing Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, international monetary authority who resigned as special Treasury advisor, for implications regarding the government's credit.

"I must seriously criticize Dr. Sprague," said Secretary Woodin, "for the assertion he practically makes that the United States Treasury is placed in a position where it must borrow $2,000,000,000 from the people on bad security.

"In any way to suggest that United States Government bonds are or can be or will be in any sense bad security is not only a reflection on the wealth and integrity of this country and its people, but impeaches Dr. Sprague's own composure and competency as a student of finance. Further, Dr. Sprague is permitting what he concedes to be a personal embarrassment to becloud his judgment and to ruffle his ordinary good temperament."

SEA IS COMBED FOR WIDOW IN DEATH PLANE

Wealthy Woman Left Notes Telling of Suicide Plan

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 22 (INS)—Attaches at municipal airport here abandoned hope today of rescuing Mrs. Louise Turck Stanton, socially prominent Junior League member, who flew out to sea in a borrowed airplane to end her life.

Relatives attributed her desperate flight to despondency over the recent death of her husband in an auto accident.

No trace of the airplane had been found today although airplanes had flown over a wide stretch of the ocean here after notes outlining her plans had been found.

In notes left behind she asked that it not be called suicide—for "I particularly dislike the word suicide"—and explained she just wanted to go "out into space and find out what it's all about, and if there isn't anything—that's O. K. too."

It was hous after she flew with about enough gasoline to last four hours and take her some 350 miles to sea, that airport authorities found the notes and began a search.

To Bert Maloney, airport manager, she wrote:

"There's not a plane on the field that can reach me (and return) or do any thing if they could—I'll be at sea, that's all, and you can count on me that the job will be thorough. I don't want any wreckage found."

Friends said they believed Mrs. Stanton was grief-stricken over the death of her husband, Gordon M. Stanton, who lost his life in an auto accident here less than two weeks ago. They had been married less than a year.

Her family—she was the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Raymond C. Turck—was silent and did not disclose the contents of notes she left to them. In the note to the airport manager, the young woman had requested that there be no "sentimentalism."

7 PICK YOUTH AS HOLDUP MAN

Seven witnesses at police headquarters today identified John J. Kerrigan, 21, of Loring st., South Boston, as one of two robbers who held up the Old France restaurant Huntington ave., and a drug store in Dorchester, Monday night.

John J. Kerrigan

Frank J. Moriarty, alias Frank Joyce, 19, who escaped two months ago from Norfolk State Prison Colony, is being sought as Kerrigan's suspected confederate.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Quinn identified Kerrigan as one of two armed men who entered the Quinn drugstore at 1726 Dorchester ave. and robbed Mrs. Quinn of $15 and the cash drawer of $10 more.

NOTE NEW CLUE IN SLAYING AT DOCTOR'S

Insurance Policy on Death Victim Is Revealed

Chicago, Nov. 22 (INS)—A note, found in the bedroom of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, mother-in-law of the slain Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, added another mystery angle to the case, police revealed today. The note, written in a feminine hand in pencil and unsigned, read:

"Precious: I'm choked. You are gone—you have called me up—and after ten minutes or so I called and called. No answer. Maybe you are sleeping. You need to be but I want to hear your voice again tonight—would give anything I have to spend an hour in real talk with you tonight—and I cannot—good night."

Police were trying to ascertain who wrote the note.

Through a maze of mysterious circumstances and developments, police delved into the events which preceeded and followed the killing yesterday of the red haired young wife of Earle Wynekoop in the operating room of the 16-room home of his mother, Dr. Alice Wynekoop, prominent physician and civic leader.

BURGLARY ANGLE FAILS

Major developments in the murder case, termed by police more baffling than the "best of thrillers," were:

Discovery of $6 which Dr. Wyne-Koop had reported stolen from her desk. The money was found in a drawer of the desk and eleminates entirely the burglary angle.

Finding of scratches from human fingernails on the face of the slain girl. The scratches were found by Police Lieut. Stewart P. Moss, who said they indicated the victim had struggled for her life before she was fatally shot in the back. The scratches also indicated, Moss said, that a hand had been placed over the young wife's mouth to keep her from screaming.

Police were unable to locate Earle, the victim's husband.

INSURANCE POLICY

With professional calm that was courteous, kindly, never resentful or Brusque, Dr. Alice Wynekoop, 62, took the stand at the corner's inquest today and testified that she knew of no insurance on the life of her daughter-in-law.

Coroner Frank Walsh announced that a life insurance company official had informed him that a $5000 double indemnity policy had been issued on the life of Rheta Wynekoop on Nov. 11, on application of the victim's mother-in-law, and that Dr. Wynekoop had paid the first premium of $42.25.

Dr. Wynekoop revealed, for the first time, that her son, husband of the slain girl, had been in Chicago with a friend in Beverly Hills, from Monday of last week Nov. 13 until yesterday, without seeing his wife, although he had telephoned her.

QUAKE SHAKES LINDBERGHS

Horta, Azores, Nov. 22 (AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who flew here yesterday from Lisbon, plan to take off tomorrow for a return flight to the continent by way of the island of Saint Michael.

Whether the return to the continent would preclude a projected flight back to the United States by way of Bermuda was not indicated.

Their big monoplane remains anchored in Horta Bay while a torrential rain kept the streets deserted and the Lindberghs indoors.

The American fliers' sleep last night was disturbed by a short and sharp earthquake at 3 a. m. There was no damage.

California police continue to hunt for body of Brooks Hart, scion of a rich San Jose family. Two prisoners are being held charged with his murder. The body is necessary for any further action against them. Hat of young Hart was found near place where "Jack" Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond claim the body was tossed into San Francisco Bay. Above is Thurmond as he dines at the San Jose Detective Bureau. Below, at left, is his pal in crime—Holmes, with Sheriff William J. Emig, of San Jose. Thurmond's chief worry is getting a square meal.

Woman's Clue Spurs Hunt for 3 More in Hart Case

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 22 (AP)—The story of a rancher's wife sent police an federal authorities on a search today for three additional participants in the kidnaping and slaying of Brooke Hart, son of a wealthy merchant, to which two men already allegedly have confessed.

The woman, Mrs. D. Silveria, told federal authorities of overhearing a conversation near the barn of her ranch at Beryessa, north of here.

The night of Hart's disappearance Nov. 9, she said, a roadster followed by a sedan, stopped near the barn and she heard a man on the running board of the roadster order a young man to get in the other machine.

"Then the sedan started away with the lights all out, and one man drove away in the roadster, fast," Mrs. Silveria said. "I am sure there were four men in the sedan, in addition to the man transferred from the roadster to the sedan."

Locations mentioned in the story coincide with events as related in the confessions of Thomas Thurmond and Jack Holmes, police said. Thurmond and Holmes are held in a San Francisco jail as the confessed kidnapers and slayers of Hart.

Search continued for the body of Hart who, Thurmond and Holmes said, they threw off the San Mateo-Hayward bridge after slugging the youth, binding his arms and weighting his body with cement blocks.

We believe that most of his "experiments" are exceedingly beneficial and entirely necessary to an accelerated recovery but we fear that some not only tend to retard recovery but contain a possible threat to popular rights and constitutional liberties.

We earnestly hope that the President will have the strength to carry through to complete success those of his experiments which are so plainly and so positively beneficial and the courage to abandon those which are not.

That was his avowed intention in the beginning and we trust for his own good and the good of the nation that he has not departed from that wise policy.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

U. S. GOLD HALTS AT $33.76

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—A price of $33.76 per ounce was fixed today for RFC purchases of newly-mined gold, unchanged from yesterday.

With the dollar again in a slump, this figure was below the world price of gold, $34.41 at London on a basis of sterling opening at $5.44 to the pound.

The dollar later showed some improvement and recovered to $5.41¾, only to depreciate again to $5.45¼.

London, Nov. 22 (AP)—The United States dollar continued to weaken during the forenoon today after having opened at $5.44 to the pound—7¾ cents lower than its last quotation yesterday.

After a slight early recovery to $5.41¾ it depreciated to $5.45¼ around noon.

JIM ROOSEVELT BACKS PLEAS OF COAKLEY

Listing of 3740 postcards from members of the Massachusetts Bar Association, 388 names of members of the Boston Bar Association, 55 members of the Legislature and 400 other prominent personages of the Commonwealth, featured resumption of Daniel H. Coakley's court fight today for reinstatement as an attorney.

All were marked in favor of reinstating the governor's councilior and the list of names included James Roosevelt, son of the President, who sent a letter to Coakley on returning recently from a European tour.

When the hearing was resumed in Supreme Court before Justice Fred T. Field, the justice asked Coakley if he had quite recovered from his illness. Coakley replied that he had and thanked the justice for is inquiry.

ENDORSED BY 4583

Then Coakley made the announcement about the postcards and letters received from the total of 4583 lawyers, legislators, judges and prominent personages, informing Justice Field that he had not requested any of these principals to be present in court because he did not wish to take up the court's time.

"I don't want you to be too considerate of the court, Mr. Coakley," responded Justice Field. "I want you to take all the time you need to present your case properly."

"I want to be as considerate as possible, your honor," answered Coakley, "because of the consideration shown by the court to me and counsel during my illness."

From his pile of postcards and letters, Coakley then selected the one written by James Roosevelt and read it. The letter asserted Roosevelt's belief that the actions of Coakley are now "on the highest plane at all times."

The petitioner then read six letters from Senator David I. Walsh, Judge Edward A. Counihan, Jr., of East Cambridge court, Congressman Arthur D. Healey of Somerville, Frederick W. Dodge, William F. Garcelon and William G. McKechnie.

VOICE FAILS HIM

After reading the last letter, Coakley's voice failed him and the reading of further letters was picked up by Atty. Michael A. Sullivan of Lawrence, one of his counsel.

James Roosevelt's letter read:

"Nov. 18, 1933.

"My dear Mr. Coakley:

"It has come to my attention on returning from Europe that several persons have allegedly refused to support your application for reinstatement to the bar for brought the baby up since she was three weeks old.

In addition, the attorney argued, the Nickersons had broken the statute chain which requires two years' continuous care of the child before adoption. The Nickersons, he said, had gone to Nova Scotia for a period of two months without taking the child with them.

Judge Dolan replied that he had weighed this matter before and had ruled against it and declared that a petition to revoke the adoption decree, presented by the attorney, was not properly before the court. The mother's only recourse now, Judge Dolan said, would be in Supreme Court. Then he turned the baby over to Mrs. Nickerson's custody.

Mrs. Nickerson crossed the courtroom and held out her arms to Jean Marie, who was seated on the minister's knee. The little girl, however, shrank back against the Rev. Mr. Bennett and started to cry.

Despite the girl's reluctance, Mrs. Nickerson picked her up in her arms and carried her into a consultation room adjoining the courtroom, but the girl was still crying when, a few moments later, she was carried out of the courthouse.

At Charles st. jail, Mrs. Partone still professed today not to know who had had Jean Marie since she was whisked out of the courtroom.

The mother also reiterated her her determination to get the child back. Since her incarceration by Judge Dolan on a conampt of court charge the mother, a nervous type of woman, has lost considerable weight.

Her only solace while in jail, she said today, has been a picture of Jean Marie which she has kept in her cell, placing it beneath her pillow at night so that if she woke up she could look at it by the thin light from the moon.

During her jail stay, sh esaid, she had been knitting a sweater for an uncle who has been caring for her other two children.

MRS. HASCALL GETS 2 YEARS MORE IN 'GIFT FAMILY' SCHEME

FOUND GUILTY OF STEALING $15,850

Judge Finds Brookline Women's Cash Used in Stock Deals

Mrs. Florence C. Hascall was found guilty of larceny in the "Gift Family" investment scheme by Judge Louis S. Cox in Suffolk Superior Court today.

She was sentenced to serve two years in Suffolk County jail, following completion of a two-year term which she is now serving at East Cambridge jail for similar larceny in Middlesex County.

Mrs. Hascall, who lived in the Back Bay, participated in an investment scheme with Miss Hazel Leland, who is likewise serving a Middlesex County jail term, but who appeared as a government witness against Mrs. Hascall at the Suffolk County trial.

TOTAL TWO YEARS

Judge Cox, hearing the case without a jury, found Mrs. Hascall guilty of larceny of $10,400 from Mrs. Ella Wright of Beacon st., Brookline, and $5250 from Mrs. Laura Bradstreet of Brookline.

He sentenced her to serev a two-year term for each larceny, but as these terms run concurrently the total is two years.

Judge Cox said he was convinced the money was taken and used for stock market trading.

Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park Street church, was in court as a defence witness, but said he knew nothing about the case and Mrs. Hascall had nothing to ask him. She said friends had called him believing he could aid the defence. She said she heard he invested money with Miss Leland.

DAIRIES AWAIT PRICE DECREE

Frederick S. Snyder, New England milk administrator, is expected to make a decision today on the proposal of the Consolidated Dairies group to raise the price of milk to the farmer three-quarters of a cent a quart.

In the event he should approve the proposal, which is contained in a communication sent to him yesterday by the Consolidated group, the question will be submitted to the milk board of arbitration and the agricultural administration at Washington for ratification.

In addition the opinion of the New England Governors' Dairy Board, which meets at Hotel Bellevue tonight, will also be sought in the event of approval to the proposed increase today.

1500 CALMED BY SONG AT FIRE

Fall River, Nov. 22—Investigation was being made here today to determine the origin of the general alarm fire which caused $75,000 damage to a department store and office building and for a time threatened to spread throughout the business district. The flames raged for four hours.

The fire was confined to the four-story brick Academy block. The first floor is occupied by Liss' department store and three other stores, all of which were heavily damaged. The upper floors are occupied by the Academy Music Hall and offices.

Some 1500 persons attending a performance at the Music Hall, were led to safety by policemen while Edward Foley sang.

Joy Rides the CWA -:- Into Men's Hearts

THE HAMMER'S CLINK SAYS "JOB, JOB, JOB!"

There's joy in a job. Men who never smiled when they worked are smiling now as they work again after months—years in some cases—of hunting for a job and living on the dole. E. Reeds Tufts finds that joy in work at Lynn.

THE PLANE'S SWISH SAYS, "JOB, JOB, JOB!"

Skilled labor finds new happiness in work. In the old days a job was just a job. Philip Swain never wore a smile like this as he sped the plane along. He never realized there was fun in his job. But now he's smilingly happy.

"ALL TOGETHER, BOYS"—A JOB AGAIN

On every visible face, save one, there is a smile as muscles long unused come back into play to move a boulder. There will be aching backs and sore shoulders and much liniment needed, but what does it matter? Men are working again, heads up, no longer reluctant recipients of charity. (Boston American photos.)

JOB RECRUITS SWING PICKS IN CWA ARMY

300 in Lynn Among Happiest of 4000, Off Dole

The rolling, snow-sprinkled fields surrounding Lynnwood's public golf course rang with the heart-stirring clangor of pick against rock yesterday, as approximately 300 of Lynn's unemployed went to work under the CWA banner.

They were among the first of Greater Boston's 4000 workers to be taken off the dole and put on the government payroll as part of the Civil Works Board's national program to "put men back to work."

FIVE-YEAR LOAF OVER

On the government payrolls, they were listed humbly enough as road builders, carpenters, and stone masons, but from the look of them they might have been kings among men.

Particularly pleased at his return to the ranks of the employed was Dominick Carmarone, 140 Blossom st., Lynn, a fattish mild-eyed, florid-faced father of six. Quite inarticulate, he was utterly incapable of answering a question concerning the length of his unemployment until a less unaware co-worker was inspired to burst out with "How longa you loaf, she wanna know, Dominick?" A wide bland smile and then, "Five year."

Dominick, who classifies as an unskilled laborer, will receive 50 cents an hour for a 30-hour week, or $15 each week.

HAPPY AND LUCKY

Probably the most obviously happy man in the CWA service was E. "Red" Tufts, 33 Savory st., Lynn, who has kept his roly-poly dimensions despite three years of unemployment. Even the birds in the trees must know the chorus of "I'm in the money," after Red's tireless and slightly off-key rendition as he plied his trade as a stone-mason. He is the father of two children.

Charley Puleo, 44, 7 Prospect st., Lynn, an intense, bewildered little man, was among the few newly-employed government laborers who found little satisfaction in his transfer from the city welfare list to the government payroll.

"Six children I got," he confided, excitedly. "With $15 dollar what I do? Better it should be that I be on the welfare. They give me $5 and a bag of flour every week and a half-ton coal every mont'."

BRIDEGROOM GETS JOB

Likewise dissatisfied with his good fortune was Lawrence Teranzi, 140 Commercial st., Lynn, father of seven children. Teranzi, who has been receiving $8 a week from the City Welfare, as well as a 24-pound sack of flour weekly and a half-ton of coal monthly, was concerned that now he is on a payroll the bill collectors will be on his trail once again.

One of the youngest of the government's new rock-belittlers is Arthur Parker, 429 Essex st., Lynn, a frail youth of nineteen. With an irresponsibility that laughs at depressions and payless days, young Parker took to himself a wife the week after he lost his job last June. Yesterday was his first day of work since then, he admitted, as he nonchalantly wielded an unaccustomed pick-axe.

"They're all types," summed up Dennis A. Sullivan, a shrewd and competent Irishman who knows his men (he is assistant to Supt. John Morrissey of the Lynn Board of Park Commissioners, which is directing the CWA program in Lynn). Good, bad and indifferent workmen.

HITLER OFFERS FRANCE PEACE, SECURITY

Equality for Germany Asked in Return by Chancellor

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany offered peace and security to France today in an interview published in the newspaper, Le Matin.

In return, he asked equality for Germany, which he said could be realized by "stages and details talked over."

To give security to France, the chancellor said he would "willingly do anything not involving dishonor or danger to my country."

If France desired to add to a Franco-German accord, "the supplementary security of a defensive alliance with England," he added, "I would willingly subscribe to it, for I have no intention of attacking our neighbors. Poland now understands that. But, because Poland is nearer Asia than you, she knows us better."

CITES SAAR QUESTION

"I am convinced," said Hitler, "that once the question of the Saar—which is German land—has been settled, there is nothing, absolutely nothing, which can oppose Germany to France.

"Alsace Lorraine? I have said often enough that we definitely have renounced it to be able to think that I have been heard. But how many times must it be repeated that we desire neither to absorb what does not belong to us nor to force the love of those who do not love us?"

To the interviewer's suggestion that there was anxiety that even though settled, the disagreements might crop up again, Hitler replied:

"I alone decide what is Germany's policy and when I give my word it is my habit to keep it.

GERMANY'S APPROVAL

"If, happening by chance to meet the French minister, I had said to him in a private talk, 'the Saar question is being settled; I consider that there is no point of contest to oppose us to each other,' I could understand it might be said, 'Hitler has something in the back of his mind—there are surprises in store for us.'

"But, I said those same things before my people whose solemn approval I asked. What more can be asked?

"If France . . . is willing to find her safety in an agreement freely discussed, I am ready to hear everything, understand everything and undertake everything."

1000 TO WORK ON ARMY ORDER

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—The War Department today placed contracts for 104 powerful anti-aircraft searchlights, built to stretch visible beams for 100 miles.

The department described the order as "an important step in the modernization of the equipment of our army." The $2,015,900 cost will come out of the $7,000,000 allotted by the public works administration for coast defenses.

The lights produce beams of 800,000,000 candle power. Of the total, 61 will be of the portable type and 43 of the mobile type.

The department estimated 1000 men will be given employment for a 15-month period in fulfilling the contract, which was awarded to the Sperry Gyroscope Co. of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Police found Wynston dead in a hotel room. They said he attempted to kill his wife because she refused to drop a suit for separate maintenance.

SPEED CAMERA DEPICTS FLY IN ACTION

Tech Inventors Give Demonstration to Scientists

A vivid cross-section of scientific accomplishment—high speed photographs showing the actions of a house fly and of a snake's tongue, were shown today to distinguished savants attending the Academy of Sciences at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A short reel of motion pictures, illustrating the use of high speed motion pictures for analyzing the motions of biological subjects, was shown by the inventors, Prof. H. E. Edgerton and K. J. Germeshausen, of the M. I. T. department of electrical engineering.

A special illumination, called stroboscopic light, was used to take the pictures. Some of the pictures showed the minute movements of a snake's tongue and a cat turning over after being dropped in mid air upside down.

HOUSE FLY ON WING

The pictures were taken at the rate of 500 frames per second. The heights were reached when 6000 frames per second were taken of the action of a house fly on the wing.

"If Whistler's 'mother' had been hung in the balcony library of priceless scientific books in the great room of the science building, and Arcturus made to ring beautiful chimes daily at the top of the grand stairway of the art institute building, at the Chicago Century of Progress Exhibition, many more thousands of visitors would have returned to their homes with better knowledge and understanding of both these key centers of the great fair," declared Gen. George O. Squier, U. S. Army Signal Corps, retired, in stressing the need for a closer combination of science and art.

Aluminum, third most prevalent metal in the earth's crust, in the next half century will register a wonderful development of artistic cast, rolled and extruded models of this regal element in wide applications both outside and inside homes, Gen. Squier said.

GEM SWINDLERS MULCT WOMEN

Diamonds, real and spurious, kept Boston police busy most of yesterday and echoes of their activities were still being heard today.

A Mattapan woman, Mrs. Mollie Whitten, of Wilder st., was a victim of the old fake diamond confidence game, paying $70 and giving diamond earrings valued at $250 to two glib-talking strangers for six supposedly smuggled diamonds which proved to be glass.

Police are searching for the strangers as well as for a man and woman who secured two diamond rings valued at $370 from Mrs. Sara Baker, of Alton pl., Brookline, on the pretense that they would buy them.

In addition police are searching for the diamond necklace of Mrs. David Cheever, of Marlboro st., Back Bay, which she reported she had lost. They also have sent Arnold Turesky to Fitchburg, where he is wanted by police for the theft of two diamond rings, valued at $700. The rings were recovered.

"KIDNAP" GIRL ADMITS HOAX

Miss Elsie Kamps, New York telephone operator who told police a weird story of being kidnaped by a Chinese vice gang and carried to Boston, admitted shortly today her story was false.

She said she ran away because she feared she had been jilted in a love affair, and wanted to get away from it all.

She will return to New York with her mother, Mrs. Katherine Kamps, this evening, it was announced as she left headquarters. Her mother arrived here this morning.

Miss Kamps told police she left New York yesterday at 3 p. m., after coming to the conclusion that her boy friend has gone back to another girl. On the way to Boston, she said, she invented her story of being kidnaped by two Chinese and one white agent of a vice ring.

This morning she ran screaming to a police car in Summer st., near the South Station and told of being liberated by the white member of the kidnap party after he had been moved to pity by her sobs,

Quincy Skunks Elude Bait, But Fall for Flashlight

Citizens of Quincy, troubled by skunks, had a hard time to solve their problem, but they were on the high road to success today.

They had called in Motorcycle Officer James A. McKay. The fact that he doubles in brass by taking charge of the city dog pound and exterminating aged dogs and cats from time to time seemed to qualify him as an expert.

But this was a big job, requiring all the best brains. So he called Health Agent Howard Porter and Game Warden Thomas Cafferela into consultation. They prescribed hamburger, flavored with arsenic.

And here the skunks proved that though beautiful, they were not dumb. In plain sight of the three experts, they investigated the lure, buried it, and—with noses held high—sought greener pastures.

But it was only a temporary victory for the beasties. Shotguns and flashlights were too much for them. The experts have bagged 25 of them in the last 10 days it was learned today.

Each night from 11 to 3, the three men make their rounds. McKay and Porter post themselves at opposite sides of a house with flashlights. When a skunk appears, they blind him with their beams, and Cafferela sounds his doom with the shotgun.

AUTOS ABLAZE, 4 ARE SAVED

James Carosella, 38, of Melvin st., Wakefield, today was being held for trial in Westport, Ct., in $50 bail on a charge of reckless driving.

The charge was filed by Connecticut state police after a car, driven by Carosella, an unemployed restaurant worker, crashed into the parked automobile of Motor Vehicle Inspector Kenneth Fagan, of Stratford, Ct., who had just entered the car after visiting the home of Dr. David L. Ellerick. Mrs. Fagan was taking her place at the wheel.

Mrs. Edna Warrington of Central st., Peabody, and Mrs. Margaret Jalvert of Litchfield st., that city, were in Carosella's car. All escaped serious injury through the quick action of Dr. Ellrick.

He found both cars in flames. Assisted by Mrs. Fagan, he managed to pull the four occupants out of the burning cars.

Both autos were destroyed by the flames which leaped higher than the 40-foot telegraph poles by the wayside.

Germany Could Mobilize 1,345,000, French Claim

Paris, Nov. 22 (INS)—Germany's alleged rearmament is being revealed by the semi-official Temps in a series of articles entitled "The Irrefutable Dossier of German Rearmament."

According to the Temps, the strength of the Reichswehr, regular German army, has increased from the 100,000 man quota, as imposed by the Versailles treaty, to 160,000, and the Reichswehr general staff resembles the former imperial staff in organization and functions.

The Temps declares the internal organization of the Reichswehr has undergone a considerable evolution both in numerical strength and armaments. Each company is composed of nine fighting units instead of six. Every battalion now includes an anti-tank artillery unit.

The artillery corps, Temps continues, has been increased by four observation and sighting groups, seven communication batteries and 12 anti-aircraft batteries. Aircraft detectors as well as radiotelephonic and radiotelegraphic equipment have been placed in service. Motorized artillery units are now being organized.

The police organization is patterned after the Reichswehr, according to the paper, with high commands and general staffs for each of the German states, and two months' military service for the policemen. The police equipment in heavy and light machine guns make them a valuable auxiliary in time of war, the paper states.

The Temps calculates that Germany at the present time could mobilize 1,345,000 men, including 165,000 Reichswehr troops, 100,000 demobilized Reichswehr troops, 80,000 militarized police and 1,000,000 Nazi storm troopers. If half this number were devoted to non-fighting services the remainder would make up 44 fighting divisions of 15,090 men each.

Jobs for 50,000 Goal For This Week

been created and all will be filled within a few days.

If all projects up for consideration today are given the board's sanction, the number of jobs created by tonight will approach 17,000. Officials believe there is a good chance of reaching the 50,000 figure by Saturday night.

POLICE RUSH TO "RIOT"

Then the new drive will start on the second 50,000 and this will be slower work, but officials believe that by Dec. 15 at the latest there will be actually working—and assured of work until Feb. 15—97,000 men and women who didn't have any jobs last week.

The first disorder in connection with the CWA program occurred at Cambridge today when two wagon-loads of police were rushed to Cofran's Pit, Concord ave., East Cambridge, in response to a riot call. First reports indicated much more serious trouble than actually occurred.

FEW BLOWS STRUCK

One of the Cambridge CWA projects is conversion of the pit into a playground. Work began yesterday and several hundred men were given cards to appear today.

A crowd of about 800 gathered. Some didn't have cards and their presence was resented by the others. All were in line for a time but several hundred left the line in a rush for pick and shovels.

Street Supt. William R. McMeniman was jostled. One or two blows were exchanged. Police quickly brought order, the men again took their places in line, and eventually nearly all were put to work.

The civil works board met informally this morning and passed upon three minor projects, voting $5734 to Hull, $2250 to West Springfield and $1443.25 to Sterling.

CURLEY MAY APPEAR

Principal interest lay, of course, in the big Boston program partially completed under the direction of Mayor Curley. There was a possibility that the mayor himself would appear before the board to supply such information as it may require with reference to the various projects outlined.

An inspiring sight today was the appearance of more than 3000 jobless who never have been on welfare, at the South Armory in Irvington st., Back Bay, to register with the federal re-employment officer for such jobs as may remain for them when those on the dole are placed.

There is still a controversy over whether these men should not have equal opportunity with those on the dole for the first jobs but in all the cities and towns the orders that all workers hired before December 1 shall be from the welfare list are being carried out.

With Chairman Joseph W. Bartlett of the board declaring he was "not satisfied" with the speed shown in approving projects and in getting men to work, even greater haste in handling applications is looked for.

Chairman Bartlett cited the Springfield civil works program in which a sum was specified for "white collar jobs," and indicated his board would approve such items.

He also disclosed that federal funds, other than civil works money, will be made available to engage doctors, dentists and nurses to treat welfare recipients throughout the state.

At the same time Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul was appointed director of women's activities in connection with the civil works program. Chairman Bartlett promised that money will be forthcoming for women's civil works activities, and also for employment of stenographers, clerical workers, teachers and nurses.

Chairman Bartlett was urging cities and towns to include in their applications projects calling for the employment of "white collar" workers. Springfield was the only community which included that phase of the problem, although Payson Smith, commissioner of education, is working out a plan for the state.

Mayor Curley has also included such a provision in his application for Boston.

BOSTON TRAIN HURLS BODY INTO CROWD

Before the horrified gaze of more than a hundred persons on their way to work, Joseph Corvill, 67-year-old Boston barber of Lunt st., Norfolk Downs, was instantly killed this morning by a New York, New Haven and Hartford train.

The accident occurred at the Norfolk Downs station, where Corvill, too, was waiting for a train to bring him into the city. He conducted a barber shop in Devonshire st., near the market and financial districts.

The train for Boston pulls into the Downs station on an outer track, and the man apparently started to walk toward it when he was killed.

ENGINE PICKS HIM UP

It is believed that he failed to notice the approach of a southbound train on the inner track. Its locomotive struck him just at the edge of the station platform, literally picking him up and hurling him ten feet into the crowd of stunned commuters.

So swift, however, was the blow of the engine's giant plunger that the man suffered only one external wound, a small cut over his left eye. He died of concussion of the brain and a fractured skull.

TRAINMEN EXONERATED

Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones called Corvill's death an accident, exonerating Engineer William Fimons and Conductor E. P. Laracdy, both of Boston, of any blame in the case.

4500 JOBS IN WAR ON MOTH

State Conservation Commissioner Samuel A. York today requested the immediate allotment of 4500 men by the CWA for a whirlwind campaign against the gypsy moth and a program of water conservation and fire protection in 212 towns east of the Connecticut river. He said that 1000 additional men will be needed for the work at an early date.

More than 2500 men are to cruise that state's forests and wood lands, creosoting moth egg clusters between now and February in an effort to stamp out this expensive pest.

The water conservation project embraces the improvement of hundreds of water holes and the construction and repair of roads so that they will be accessible to fire fighting equipment.

Jobless Heroes, Who Spurn Dole, Go Over Top at Zero Hour for CWA Work

Men who have fought the bitter battle of unemployment without resource to charity stormed the South Armory in Irvington st., Back Bay, today to register for CWA jobs to be alloted those not on the dole.

Here was the most courageous division in the army of the unemployed scaling the heights of hope, a picture at once, and paradoxically, drab and colorful, and as inspiring as any presented in Boston in many years.

More than 2500 were in line before 9 o'clock when the armory doors were opened.

During the night the word had gone forth that the federal registration bureau, through which men not on welfare lists will be placed in jobs, had been transferred from 169 Congress st. to the armory, for need of room.

GATHER AT DAWN

By daybreak they had begun to gather there in front of the barred doors under the morning shadow of the great stone walls. By 9 o'clock the line extended, in a column of fours, for two blocks back from the doors—a line of men waiting bravely, patiently, as they have waited through bitter and hungry months, for a chance at work.

A motly gathering, like a cross-section of the second draft during the war, except that some were younger than the youngest of that draft, and many were older.

Here was a man well along in his sixties, gray of hair, fresh-shaved, not badly dressed except that the sleeves of his blue overcoat were worn to dangling threads. Neat and respectable but you could tell he had ben hard-ridden from the lines about his mouth.

He might once have been a bookkeeper in a bank or a broker's trusted clerk. He never raised any empires and never smashed any. And never would. But his has been a good fight. Head up, eyes still clear. A new hope in them now.

Here was a young man about 30, lean and hard of jaw and a little hard of eye, in dungarees under a loose brown overcoat which quite obviously had been sold, originally at least, to a much smaller man. His big wrists showed for a couple of inches below the sleeves. A steel rigger perhaps, the kind of a fellow who lights cigarettes from hot rivets 18 stories up. He, too, has been ridden hard.

And here's an old man—really old, stooped and bent—and unless Uncle Sam is making jobs for watchmen there won't be much for him. Yet there's a new hope in his light blue eyes under white brows. A little man, this, an old man. And if he'd tel you what he has been through and how he has managed to kep from "living off the town," you'd probably have a good story.

There is an epic wrapped up in every life in this long line that goes back two blocks and goes forward slowly, step by step, and quietly and hopefully, toward the registration desk under the big shadowy arch at the armory's end.

These men—this man here, this old one; this one here, this lame one; this one here, this young one whose eyes say, "Well, to hell with it, whether I do or don't!"—all these men, remember, haven't any work and haven't had work and some of them have come through fire and yet not one of them has gone on the dole.

EVEN BREAK ASKED

They're wondering a little, along that line, talking one to another—low murmuring—why it is that men who haven't asked for help shouldn't at least be given an even break with those who have. Wondering why the welfare men get the first jobs.

And one man says, "What kind of a reward is that for keeping your head up, I ask you?"

And the man beside him answers, "Well, most of the guys on the welfare list have big families."

And the man behind the second man says, "Anyhow, with $12,000,000 there'd ought to be plenty of work—for a while anyway."

Each of these men still has his pride and each of these men is an epic in himself. If you could get these men to talk! But you can't; they're like the men who came back from war; they've seen things and been through things that are best forgotten.

All they want now is a job. And many of them will get those jobs now. There's hope along that two-block line.

The men move up. And more men come. Every traffic officer in the South End and downtown and in the Back Bay has his little knot of men around him asking: "Where's that armory, officer, fear that it might affect their relation with myself.

"I am taking this opportunity to tell you that no person need have any such fears in this matter.

"As you well know, I was not a resident of this State at the time of your original difficulties, and, therefore, of course, it would be quite improper for me to make any declarations concerning them.

"It is, however, my understanding that your original disbarment was not intended in any way to be permanent in its nature.

"Therefore, in fairness to you, may I say that upon such occasions as I have met you, I have found your actions and attitude to have been upon the highest plane at all times.

FRIEND OF DANIEL H., JR.

"As far as I am concerned, you have always exhibited an example which any citizen might well follow.

"Further, the rather close contacts which I have had with your son, Daniel H. Coakley, Jr., have resulted in what I hope is a mutually warm friendship. As your son, I have the highest regard for him in every way.

"I am, therefore, writing this, and you may of course use it in whatever way you see fit, in the hope that there may be no doubt in your mind of my full and best wishes both for you and for your family.

"Yours sinceley,
"JAMES ROOSEVELT."

Senator Walsh wrote as follows:

"Clinton, Mass., Aug. 19, 1933.
"My Dear Mr. Coakley:

"You are at liberty to use my name as one who endorses your petition for reinstatement as a member of the bar of Suffolk County.

JUSTIFIED BY WALSH

"As I understand your petition, it is based on the assumption that in view of your age, the number of years you have been deprived of an opportunity to practice your profession, and the character of your public service during that time in the Governor's Council, you are entitled to reinstatement and seek such reinstatement without questioning the legality of any of the previous proceedings.

"For some time it has been my feeling that you are justified in your efforts for reinstatement and for return to the practice of your profession.

"I take this opportunity of informing you that I am now writing to you with the many other members of the legal profession in endorsing your pending application, and you may use this letter as an endorsement of your petition. "Sincerely yours,
"DAVID I. WALSH."

William G. McKechnie, former president of the Springfield Bar Association, wrote, in part:

"I cannot imagine the Supreme Court taking any other attitude in the matter except to reinstate you, and if Judge Lummus hears your petition, you will have the fairest, kindliest and most judicial of judges."

FROM OTHER LEADERS

Other letters were from Frank T. Brothers, president of the Berkshire County Bar Association; U. S. Dist. Atty. Francis J. W. Ford, who said he considered Coakley's exemplary conduct recommended reinstatement and he was unqualifiedly in favor of it; A. C. Webber, S. Howard Donnell, former district attorney of Essex County; Mayor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, Collector of the Port Joseph A. Maynard, Judge Robert A. Welch of Provincetown district court, Congressman John J. Douglass, Paul E. Tierney of the State Board of Tax Appeals, and Dean Homer Albers of the B. U. Law School.

lized country on earth, a record that disgraces "the richest nation."

It is customary to attribute such deaths to lack of medical care. The New York Academy of Medicine reports that the incompetency of doctors is responsible for 61 per cent of "avoidable" deaths of mothers during childbirth, during the last three years in New York State.

"Lack of judgment, lack of skill, or careless inattention" are attributed to the guilty doctors. It ought to be somebody's business to take an interest in that.

Trapped, threatened with arrest, forced to choose between her own ruin and her sister's, she was offered one chance to save herself. It meant playing a part, pretending to love a man she hated, submitting to kisses that filled her with passion in spite of herself. And, with every passing moment, she was falling deeper and deeper into the toils of this man who had so unscrupulously fascinated other women to their everlasting regret! All because of a few foolishly written words—the kind of letters that all men and women recklessly write at some time or other, and later wish they hadn't—letters that mean nothing when they are written, yet mean everything when they threaten to wreck a life's peace and happiness. LITVINOFF WILL SAIL SATURDAY

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Maxim Litvinoff apparently will return home prior to final settlement of Russo-American debts and claims.

Such a development, officials hasten to explain, would indicate no serious obstacle to a satisfactory understanding, but would result rather from the mass of material needing study.

An important factor is the heavy press of new treasury duties that have kept Acting Secretary Morgenthau from devoting more time to the Russian question. The debts and claims were put in Morgenthau's hands by President Roosevelt.

The Soviet commissar plans to leave Washington tomorrow or Friday and sail from New York Saturday. Work he leaves behind will be handled, pending the arrival of Alexander Troyanosky, new ambassador, by Boris Skvirsky, chief of the Soviet information bureau, who will act as charge

Sailor Learns About Women From Her

By PEGGY DOYLE

Although it is generally accepted by thoughtless landlubbers that a sailor has a sweetheart in every port, the fact is that under the little pocket of his blue jersey there is usually a heart aching for the girl he left behind him.

It's all very well to sing rollicking chanteys and wink, nudge and titter on the park benches during furlough but, sooner or later, a direct hit is scored on the sailor's reputedly free-heart. And when this is true his next appointment with his beloved is not when he comes back from work but when he comes back from China—or San Diego.

A typical case in point is provided by S. J. Esterhazy, former Boston boy, now with the fleet at San Diego. Aboard the U. S. S. Tillman, young Esterhazy, in a sadly disillusioned strain, has written a letter to the editor of the Boston Evening American, in which he states that a Boston girl (could you believe it?), whom he kissed good-bye and asked to wait for him two months ago, couldn't even wait that long.

Let Sailor Esterhazy tell you about it:

"Is there a woman who can truthfully say, 'I'll wait for you because I know you'll be back some day?' If so I should like to meet up with this superwoman. From my recent experience, I don't believe she exists.

"Now, here is my side of the story: I'm a sailor, aboard the U. S. S. Tillman, and I find that there are more people knocking and blaming sailors for being low-down and causing countless feminine heart-aches. Well, I'm one of thousands of sailors who've tried to be decent but I find the one I loved and trusted has betrayed me. She just couldn't wait for me."

SALES GAIN IN NOVEMBER

Already scores of reservations have been made for the NRA luncheon rally on Friday in the Chamber of Commerce building, under the auspices of the Boston Recovery Committee.

Former Gov. William E. Sweet, of Colorado; Gov. Ely, Mayor Curley, Mayor-elect Mansfield, Vincent Astor and Maj. Travers D. Carman, Suffolk County NRA chairman, will be among the speakers to sing the praises of the Blue Eagle.

They will back up their praises with statistics, according to the board, which already points to great gains made this month by the textile industry.

Figures compiled by the Recovery Board, in conjunction with the Federal Reserve Bank, show not only an immense improvement in this industry as compared with October, 1932, but also reveal that every county in the state, with the exception of Suffolk, has shown a large gain in sales during the last two weeks of the month.

'Darling Kitten' Sued for Divorce

Army Man's Loving Is Told of by Husband in Farr Case

River Trips and Other Indiscreet Acts Are Claimed in Court

Midnight canoe rides along the Charles river, yachting trips, "strip poker" parties and secret trysts with different men, were numbered among the activities of Mrs. Gertrude L. Farr of Boston, described by her husband, William J. Farr, dietician for a wealthy Marblehead family, in Salem probate court today, where he sought a divorce.

William J. Landry, an army officer stationed at Fort Devens, was a constant companion to Mrs. Farr, the husband told Judge O'Brien, and the court was shown a picture of the soldier and the young wife. The inscription on the back of the picture read, "To my darling kitten, from Billy."

Farr testified that he and a friend stood under some birch trees ni Dedham last February and looked into the bedroom where his wife was living. He saw her and Landry, he said, and his wife sat on the bed. As Landry approached her the lights went out.

"ENGAGEMENT RING"

Last May Mrs. Farr bought a canoe, the husband said, and she and Landry were seen on the Charles River several times after midnight. His wife told him she and the soldier spent numerous nights together and went on several week-end trips, Farr testified. But she maintained there was never anything immoral about the trips.

Yachting parties and auto rides with a Captain Jackson were enjoyed by Mrs. Farr during the summer of 1932, the husband testified. And when the captain put the yacht away in September, Mrs. Farr stated she was going to marry Jackson. She showed a large diamond ring, Farr said, and said the captain gave it to her.

Farr said he got a bill for the ring later and learned his wife had bought it.

POKER FOR CLOTHES

While he and his wife were visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nisson in Needham in February, 1930, Farr said, he helped the hostess with the dinner dishes. He noticed the liing rooms were closed, eh said, and going to the piazza he loked under the shade and saw his wife and Nisson on a divan. Both were partly disrobed he said.

George E. Cole of Roxbury, a school teacher, testified that Mrs. Farr and Harold Geyer of Hyde Park called at his home in March, 1932.

Another man joined the couple there later, he said, and he left them in the living room while he tended the furnace. When he returned, he told th court, the two men nad Mrs. Farr were playing strpi poker. The men were attired in shorts, he said.

Landry, Geyer and Nisson were named as co-respondents by the husband and while appearancese were filed by them and the wife, none was present in court to contest the suit. Judge O'Brien took the case under advisement.

RUNAWAY BABY OUTWITS POLICE

Police of the old Joy st. station today found in three-year-old Eddie Ryczek of Bullfinch st., a boy who could resist the blandishments of ice crea mand candy—a creature heretofore believed to be mythical.

He was picked up—lost—in Somerset st., by Patrolmen Dennis F. Collins and William R. Smith in a scout car. They took him to the station where Patrolman William Walsh began treating him to the sweets that these star police boarders always get in order to learn their names. But Eddie just wouldn't talk.

He was an old hand at this business of dealing with the police. It was the third time he had been lost in six weeks, so they did not get his name until his mother called for him.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TRAMPS HILLS

Reedsville, W. Va., Nov. 22 (AP)—Hatless and coatless, with her hair blowing in a chill November breeze, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tramped several miles across West Virginia's hills today inspecting her homeland project for rehabilitation of destitute coal miners.

Her eyes twinkled with satisfaction as she viewed the 1000-acre site to become a self-sustaining colony.

"I am very much pleased," she told Bushrod Grimes, of the interior department, director of the project.

The wife of the President set out to investigate the old estate after an automobile ride from Fairmont, where she arrived by train from Washington.

$420,100 MORE FOR BAY STATE

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Secretary Ickes today allotted $12,309,230 for 54 non-federal public works projects in 27 states, including the following for Bay State:

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts received a loan and grant of $4500 for construction of three officers' cottages at the Boston State Hospital. Work can start in one month and 25 men be employed six months.

Newton received a loan and grant of $248,400 for construction of a two-story 16 classroom and gymnasium auditorium school at Newtonville. Work can start in three months and 100 men be employed a year.

Newton also received a loan and grant og $60,700 to build an extension to the Frank A. Day junior high school. Work can start in two months and 30 men be employed seven months.

Worcester received a grant of $66,000 representing 30 per cent of labor and material costs on a $251,343 sewer project. No loan was requested. Work can start in two weeks and public works officials estimated 175 men would be employed six months.

Hunger Excuse Fails This Purse-Snatcher

The plea of a handbag snatcher, that he was hungry made no impression in Dorchester court today and the thief, John Montague, 22, of Bowdoin st., Dorchester, was sentenced to three months.

Montague was arrested last night after a chase that began when he snatched the purse containing $42, of Mrs. Ethel Mulcahey, 33 Spaulding st., Dorchester, near her home. A motorist Samuel George, 113 King st., followed Montague, finally collaring him.

Lasell Girl's Auto Hits Newton Man, 71

Arthur W. Corrigan, 71, of 230 Watertown st., West Newton, was seriously injured today when hit by an automobile on Watertown st., near Washington st., near his home. At Newton Hospital, he was found to be suffering from a possible fracture of the skull.

The automobile, police say, was operated by Eleanor Elms, 20, of 34 Austin rd., West Medford. She is a student at Lasell, Jr., College, Auburndale.

Mayor-Elect Roche Recovers From Cold

ELY PINS TRADE HOPE TO FIRM DOLLAR

New York, Nov. 22 (US)—"Until the dollar has been stabilised, I do not think there will be any permanent improvement in business."

This was the declaration of Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, before a call yesterday on former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, whose name he placed in nomination for the Presidency at the Democratic convention in Chicago in 1932.

He continued that stabilization is a prerequisite for economic recovery and added:

"It does not matter much what figure is placed on the dollar but stabilization should come and come quickly."

Gov. Ely also said that business conditions in his state have shown a general improvement under President Roosevelt's recovery program. He said:

The effect of the NRA in Massachusetts on the whole has been beneficial. That is true particularly in the textile industry. The textile code was the first one signed and in part it wiped out the wage and hour differentials between our state and the South.

"This differential had resulted in loss of approximately one-third of the state's spindles. With the signing of the code the textile manufacturers recovered old accounts which had not been heard from for from five to eight years.

"The textile manufacturers began working full time and employed more men than in 1928. The shoe industry also showed an improvement in July and August but there again has been a setback.

SETTLE'S AIDE NEAR JUMP

Bridgeton, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP)—Back from a region where air is thin and cosmic rays are thick, Maj. Chester L. Fordney, U. S. Marine Corps, says he almost joined the "Caterpillar Club" near the close of his successful flight to the stratosphere with Lieut.-Com. T. G. W. Settle.

"I had just looked out a hatch and seen water beneath when Commander Settle remarked perhaps I'd have to take the parachute and go overboard as ballast," Fordney related.

"'What about that water?' I queried. 'Why we're over that already, that was Delaware Bay,' he answered. "But I didn't have to jump after all."

AL SMITH WILL REVIEW CRIME

New York, Nov. 22 (INS)—Fear that the hordes of gangsters, employed in rum-running, would turn to "petty kidnaping" upon the repeal of prohibition was expressed today by Col. Franklin S. Hutchinson, director of investigation for the senatorial sub-committee on racketeering, headed by United States Senator Royal S. Copeland.

A committee hearing will be held tomorrow. Former Governor Alfred E. Smith will be the first witness.

"Unless we can find ways to stop it, I am afraid there may be a great many kidnapings of middle class persons for small sums of money," Col. Hutchinson said.

"The success of the government in dealing with the kidnaping of wealthy victims may stop such a trend," he continued.

"We are getting more demands for federal intervention to curb crime. Many people urge a federal police without regard for state rights. If there is any such force recommended to Congress it must be one to co-operate with state authorities and not having jurisdiction within the states."

TROOPERS CURB PRISON RIOTS

Philadelphia, Nov. 22 (INS)—Augmenting the regular guards, state police, armed with tear gas bombs and sawed-off shotguns, transformed Pennsylvania's Eastern Penitentiary into an armed camp today after 1200 convicts staged the most destructive riot in the hundred-year-old history of the institution.

Clubs and torches in the hands of a band of 75 desperate long-termers made a shambles of the dye shop and weaving room and damaged the kitchen and chaplain's quarters. Loss was estimated at $20,000.

The riot was the second in 72 hours and the fourth major outbreak in six weeks.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot blamed Henry N. Woolman, chairman of the prison board of trustees, for penitentiary conditions which resulted in the previous disturbances and demanded his resignation last week. When Woolman refused to resign the Governor dismissed him and appointed Dr. Lewis Robinson, a penologist, in his place.

Youth Missing Year Back to Wed Girl He Jilted

Providence, R. I., Nov. 22—Revising the tale of Enoch Arden, Winthrop Scott Weatherbee, of Attleboro, who vanished a year ago after notifying his fiancee he planned to commit suicide, has reappeared to take up life where he left it and wed the girl.

W. S. Weatherbee.

Accompanied by Miss Edith Armitage of East Providence, Weatherbee visited the city clerk and took out a marriage license.

He is understood to have been employed as a chauffeur in Florida, pending settlement of his father's estate, which netted him $7000.

Weatherbee had been keeping company for some time with Miss Armitage when he dropped out of sight last November, after mailing suicide notes to her and to Judge Ralph C. Estes of Attleboro his counsel.

"By the time you get this I will have gone to join mother and dad and have peace," he wrote. "I am going to take the best way out. I am going to take a plunge, and it will be my last swim."

The young man's auto was found abandoned in East Providence near Green Pond.

Nothing was heard from Weatherbee until last August when Judge Estes announced the youth was in Florida.

SANTASON SET FOR JORDAN'S

Santaland, North Pole, Nov. 22—Santason, whose daddy incidentally is none other than Santa Claus, is preparing for his fifth trip across the barren wastelands of the frozen North to Boston where he will be the guest of Jordan Marsh Company, New England department store.

The bright young son of that old white bearded gentleman who sneaks down the chimney after all good little girls and boys are asleep, will make the trip in his father's red and green sleigh which will be drawn by those famous reindeers of fable and fancy, Dasher, Dancer, Prancer, Vixen, Comet, Cupid, Donder and Blitzen, to Nome, Alaska, and thence by plane.

Santason will, as usual, play host to hundreds of children throughout New England during his Christmas season visit here.

Wonderful Meals

AROUND THE BEND, ENTERING the last lap of this month of Managers competition, the entire roster of New England Waldorfs comes whizzing along . . . neck and neck.

- I have mentioned several times what an amazing thing to me this month has been. I want to repeat it . . . for while I knew I had just about the finest group of men in charge of our restaurants it is possible to find, the ingenuity they are using and the wise choice they are making in the way of their daily specials has delighted me.
- So, I say to you, there are no better restaurant men in the country than the group I have around me. Their care of details, their never failing courtesy and their enthusiasm for their job is what makes Waldorf what it is today.
- For instance . . . take "Billy" Slade, manager of the Waldorf at 128 Hanover Street, Boston. "Billy" has been with us going on eighteen years . . . with the exception of his army service when he was cook of the 24th Company . . . Coast Artillery.
- You never saw a more enthusiastic Waldorf man than Slade . . . his whole career has been wrapped up in his Waldorf life and the very reason he manages that very important unit shows how good he is.
- "Billy" likes to sell sausage patties . . . and so offers this special.

ARTHUR LONG, Waldorf Manager at 1769 Washington St., Boston.

- Arthur Long . . . commonly known as "Red" has all the fire and the pep that goes with that sorrel top of his.
- "Red" has charge of that fine, newly remodeled Waldorf at 1769 Washington Street, Boston, out near Massachusetts Avenue. In his nine years with us "Red" has never done a better job than he is doing now. If you have occasion to eat at that beautiful store you will see how the customers seem to appreciate his earnestness, and his never failing courtesy.

"Ward's Soft Bun is the finest bread I have ever tasted" says Mrs. Emile F. Coulon

"Ward's Soft Bun Bread is the finest bread I have ever tasted . . . in fact, I believe it is the very finest bread that it is possible to buy," says Mrs. Coulon. "For I have never found a bread to equal the flavor of Ward's, much less compare with it." An experience, Mrs. Coulon, general to all who have had the opportunity to try this really superior loaf.

You see there's a reason! Ward's Soft Bun Bread is shaped and baked differently to improve its flavor and keep it fresh. That's the reason why Mrs. Coulon says, "Ward's Soft Bun Bread never seems to grow stale. Family and friends compliment me about it. I find no little satisfaction in the fact that many of my friends are using Ward's Soft Bun Bread today because they first discovered its deliciousness at my table."

Ward's Soft Bun Bread is made of the purest and finest ingredients obtainable . . . in a modern, spotlessly clean bakery. It is a better loaf . . . the best bread on the market today . . . endorsed by Good Housekeeping Institute . . . and guaranteed to be fresh in every respect, or your money back. The Keyhole on the News

Unbecoming

Decisiveness is an outstanding characteristic of Joseph W. Bartlett, czar of the $12,000,000, job-making, job-giving federal civil works administration in Massachusetts.

Legal and military training both help build up Atty. Bartlett's forceful personality.

Friends tell of an incident which occurred when the present civil works administrator was a major in the judge advocate general's department, Seventh (Regular) Division A. E. F.

Before a trial board, of which Major Bartlett was chairman, a veteran infantry corporal, lately detailed for special duty in a chemical laboratory, was being court martialed for allegedly having used "language unbecoming to a non-commissioned officer."

Prosecution witnesses were all ready, but Maj. Bartlett, as usual, was prepared to cut red tape.

"Let's hear the prisoner first," he suggested. "Take the stand, corporal, and tell us your story."

"Well, sir, testified the accused non-com, a leather-faced old-timer, with a frosty twinkle in his eye. "It was like this. Private Hastings, a clumsy feller, sir, was trying in his dumb way to put some hot liquid up on a shelf. And he lost his balance, sir, and spilled the whole can of b'iling liquid down my neck and all over my new uniform. And so, sir, I says to him, I says . . ."

The court waited hopefully.

"I says to him," continued the corporal, "'Really, Private Hastings, you should be more careful', and ——"

"That'll do, corporal," interrupted Maj. Bartlett, "I find you guilty, as charged. Using language unbecoming to an army non-com. Sentence indefinitely suspended. And the prisoner discharged."

Collegiate

Harvard's S. B. (Bachelor of Science) degree represents "only an ignorance of Latin," charges the Harvard Crimson. Crimson editors are going to bare the hoax, they promise . . . Also, they are going to venture predictions on what will become of the Harvard Athletic Association "when public interest in amateur football has ceased."

And Boston University has its heebie-jeebies, too. With T. Everett Fairchild, social activities secretary, instituting a move to install resident matrons in heretofore 100-per cent he-male frat-houses.

"There are three distinct advantages in having an elderly woman of fine character and high moral standards living with the boys, Secretary Fairchild points out. "In the first place the house is kept clean and in order—as the boys' own homes are kept. Then, too, there is a marked absence of profanity. And, finally, the student develops a fineness of manner that goes with good associations."

Natural

Even undertakers have their lighter moments, confesses Sen. Joe Langone. There are occasions, when, well sheltered from the public gaze, professional morticians get together for a friendly laugh at their own solemnities.

At one such occasion, which transpired in connection with an undertakers dinner, competing groups stage mock funerals in broadly burlesqued style, each group striving to win a prize offered for the best parody of trade methods.

There were "corpses" which sat up in their coffins, exchanging repartee with the mourners.

There were "sorrowing relatives" who told funny stories en route to make-believe cemeteries.

But the laugh of the evening came when young Sen. Langone, mimicking in perfect pantomime the mannerisms of a family friend come to look his last at the "remains," strode slowly across a room to a shining mahogany piano, laid a small bouquet of flowers on the instrument, regarded its keyboard as if lovingly studying the face of a deceased friend, brushed away an imaginary tear, and said, "Ah, he looks natural—and what a wonderful set of teeth he had."

Walsh likes to give banjo clocks to his closest friends . . . And former Gov. Frank Allen gives innumerable pairs of gloves . . . Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan, on days off, likes to watch boat races . . . High School Teacher Jimmie Collins, once an amateur boxer of note, had a record of 15 bouts and 15 consecutive victories . . . Dist.-Atty. William J. O'Brien is a connoisseur of Italian spaghetti—and spaghetti restaurants . . . Tufts students are playing newsboys on downtown streets this week, peddling copies of a Boston daily paper which is celebrating an anniversary . . . Ernest "Bugs" Bartel, honor student at Dean Academy, gained his nickname by assembling one of New England's finest amateur collections of beetles, moths, and butterflies . . . Mayor James M. Curley, possessor of a splendid self-acquired education, has remarkable ability to milk a book of its contents. He reads like lightning when reading silently, and very rapidly aloud. When Mrs. Curley was alive, but confined to her bed, Mayor Curley used to read her a full, book-length novel every night from start to finish. And no pressure of business nor political appointment was ever allowed to interfere.

$392,206 NOW SUBSCRIBED IN JEWISH DRIVE

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Nearly $400,000 has been subscribed to the Associated Jewish Philanthropies drive, workers reported today at the noon meeting. This amount is $6000 more than was raised in last year's canvass.

With additional donations of $9464 announced at today's rally at campaign headquarters by Sidney Rabinovitz, general chairman of the drive, the grand total so far reached is $392,206, or financial support for 247 days for the social agencies and subsidiaries of the Philanthropies.

Officials of the campaign are continuing the drive, while the cream of the volunteer workers keep up their efforts to raise more money toward the $578,460 quota originally established. If full support for the entire ensuing year is to be had this sum must be obtained.

Of the donations declared today the $1500 contribution from Sears, Roebuck Company, was outstanding. Next came the $750 subscription of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. representative of an organization pledge. Although from individuals, $1000 was announced from Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shuman.

Other subscriptions included: $250, Brighton Dressed Beef Co., in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Madfis; $100, each by the Moxie Co., Siegel and Siegel; Selwyn Shoe Co.; Standard Sanitary Mfg. Co.; Edward Goldman; Washington Jewelry Co. and two anonymous donations; one anonymous donation of $200 and another of $300; $330, Frank Cohen; $300, Kaplan and $200, Sam Pinanski.

STUART FEARED 'PLANK WALK' IN FOX DEAL

Washington, Nov. 22 (INS)—By extending lavish credit to a banker's syndicate, the Chase National Bank of New York, was responsible for the 1930 overthrow of William Fox as a movie czar, it was revealed today at the Senate banking inquiry.

Harley L. Clarke, Chicago capitalist, gave the bank credit for financing the Fox battle. A resume showed Chase loans to Fox's enemies, totalled $103,685,000 in 18 months.

An "inside story" of Wall Street methods was disclosed in stenographic report of a phone conversation between Clarke and Harold L. Stuart, head of Halsey Stuart & Co., in the midst of the Fox war.

STUART ENTERS FRAY

The firm had been Fox's bankers but believed the Clarke group, which included Alberth. Wiggin, then Chase Bank head, were trying to make it "walk the plank." The report, found in the Chase files, follows:

"I have been put on the end of a springboard and told to jump off," said Stuart.

"What do you mean?" asked Clarke.

"Well, for one thing, Blumenthal and Greenfield (New York bankers) knew what was going on and I didn't."

"If they got any information, they didn't get it from me," replied Clarke. "If you want to play ball with me, you tell me what you have on me and if you have anything on me, I will come clean with you. I have a reputation as well as you."

"I don't think you ought to talk to me like that," retorted Stuart. "I feel as though I've been pushed out of the picture."

Ferdinand Pecora, Senate counsel, revealed a $28,050,000 loss by the public in bonds of General Theatres Equipment Corp., used by bankers in the Fox fight. This loss was suffered by the public in its purchase of a $30,000,000 bond issue. The bonds were issued in 1930, to finance extension of the banker's movie empire.

A purchasing group of bankers paid the corporation $27,000,000 for the bonds and resold them six days later to selling group for $28,950,000. This represented a profit to the bankers of $1,950,000 in six days, without investment of a dime.

BREWERY SET FOR REPEAL

When Repeal becomes effective on Dec. 5, Croft Ale, the successor to the New England favorite, Sterling Ale, will be on sale throughout the North Atlantic States, according to Col. H. J. Heasley, sales manager of the Croft Brewing Company.

Under the direction of Walter J. Croft, brewmaster, who directed the making of Sterling Ale, its successor, Croft Ale, will be brewed at the Highland Spring brewery at Roxbury Crossing.

According to Rudoph P. Bishoff, president of the brewery corporation, the brew will be produced under the most advanced methods known to science. Recognizing that his brew is worthy of only the best advertising mediums, Mr. Bishoff says that he will virtually confine the advertising of the new full strength Croft Ale to newspapers.

Under present conditions full strength Croft Ale cannot be offered for sale but the minute that prohibition is wiped from the statute books the Croft Brewing Company plans to have its product on tap throughout New England.

GEORGE HOLLAND REVIEWS "All Good Americans" at the Plymouth -:- -:- Latest Gossip of All Hollywood Studios BY LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Courtney Burr's New Play Has Laughs Aplenty in Unfolding Paris Latin Quarter Story

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Park avenue's most important gift to the stage, Miss Hope Williams, who wears her hair like a boy yet is enchantingly feminine, undertook last night her first starring performance since G. Bernard Shaw's "Too True to Be Good," at the Plymouth Theater. Miss Williams is cast happily in her new vehicle as a self-exiled American girl, one of a set of intriguing characters whom the authors, Laura and S. J. Perelman, aptly and a bit sarcastically, look to for their play's title.

Hope Williams

The name of Miss Williams' play is "All Good Americans," and since Elmer Rice wrote "The Left Bank" it is the first major attempt by local scriveners for the stage to catch the fascinating atmosphere of the Paris Latin quarter. They have been successful. The unfragrant breath of the Seine seems fairly to vaporize over the proceedings. This is a smart and fashionable piece of writing. Courtney Burr, New York's current talk-of-the-town by reason of his "Sailor, Beware," (the show everybody had a chance to buy in on but didn't), produced "All Good Americans." With three excellent settings, smart costumings and able direction and casting, he has done well by the Perelmans.

His most able master-minding, in my opinion, was the engagement of Fred Keating, who was once a good magician, and Mary Philips, one of the best of our graduate ingenues, in the two leading roles—if we except that of Miss Williams' "Julie Gable."

* * *

Ideal Leading Man

With a bit of thought, we should NOT except the part played by Miss Williams. I do not think the part her authors have given her is a real starring role, and without much effort a few actresses prominent in the current theater scene could do it equally well if not better.

However, Miss Williams is Miss Williams, and New York's ticket-buyers have proved too frequently that they have their own opinion about her as an attraction. Fred Keating upholds the certainty about his ability established when he played opposite Tallulah Bankhead last season in that play about a bride left at the church. He is excellent, as good a leading man as any star could desire. Miss Philips has one of those juicy parts that fell for a season or two in the lap of Jean Dixon. Miss Philips is also excellent.

* * *

In a light-waisted story that sparkling lines give real girth, Miss Williams' doings as a fashion writer in Paris are recorded by the playwrights. She enters Jimmie's bar (rooms upstairs) trailed by a Scalingham, which is indisputably a Scalingham because a program note, first of its kind, traces its permanent abode to the Juniper Kennels of New Jersey. Mary Philips plays Cassie Bond, who is an artist, assistant and roommate to Julie. The two girls and Pat Wells, an unpublished author, play tag verbally with an array of American locals touring for the time in Paris.

* * *

True to Type

Their Paris intimates are a couple of American newspapermen, one a chiseler, the other a simpleton and both probably true to type—in Paris.

* * *

Fred Keating is "Pat." He is a gent with a sense of values, a literate sense of humor, and palpably unsatisfied with his lot, although it is communicated without speeches, as a "commissioner," a ten per cent guide for the Americans loose in the City of Joy. One of Pat's current clients is a young American stock-broker named Rex Fleming, played by Coburn Goodwin. He introduces Rex to Julie, and the American takes a quick fancy to his expatriate country-girl.

Another of Pat's clients is a Southern chit, played beautifully by Janet McLeary, who buys a diamond necklace and tries to smuggle it into her Fatherland. This furnishes an opportunity for a second-act misunderstandings. The Southern girl, Miss Porter, is nabbed at the port of entry and is fined the price of a necklace.

* * *

All Ends Well

Julie suspects that a proposal of marriage by Mr. Keating's "Pat Wells" has been supported by funds acquired for turning in the Southern girl to the authorities as a smuggler. It's a pretty weak device for a second-act curtain, but there it is.

Julie and Pat are estranged in the third act to the point where Julie is betrothed to Rex, the stock-broker, whose yearning proved more than a Paris whim. It ends in marriage between Rex and Julie, and I wish I hadn't given this thumb-nail of the story.

For most important about Mr. Burr's second play of the season is the superb casting (with one exception that will be remedied) and the nice flare for smart comedy writing evidenced by the Perelmans.

Angna Enters on Stage

A woman who dances, paints, draws, writes, and designs and and makes costumes in this world of specialists, must be individual, at least. A woman is Angna Enters who brings her program of "Episodes and and Compositions in Dance Form," to the stage of the Reperatory theater, tonight and Thursday. She started to dance in order to paint.

Stage, Screen, at Strand

Dramatic stock on the stage, a feature picture and short subjects on the screen, presented on the same program twice daily seems to appeal to amusement-seekers of the Back Bay section. Tomorrow the Galvin Players open their fifth week at the Strand Theater, on Huntington ave., offering Avery Hopwood's farce in three acts, "Fair and Warmer."

On the screen, the offering will be "Too Much Harmony," with Bing Crosby. The stage production can be seen at 3:15 and 8:20, the feature picture preceding and following the stage show.

Jetson Ryder in Recital

By MOSES SMITH

Jetson Ryder, baritone, singing at Jordan Hall last night before an attentive audience, goodly in size and cordial in spirit, presented a most attractive program.

A half dozen and more of the longish list of numbers were offered for the first time in Boston. Among these were two fine works by Arnold Schoenberg, intended by the singer, no doubt, as a gesture of tribute to the great composer, now living in Boston.

Beginning with an old Italian air, Mr. Ryder sang groups of French, British, German and American songs—for the most part of recent vintage. Wherever it was possible—and on rare occasions where it was not—the singer dramatized the text and sought for the limit of expressiveness in the music. It is rare to hear singing of such conviction and forcefulness from an American.

There were negative compensations, however. While such songs as Coleridge Taylor's "Eleanore" and Weingartner's "Ich Denke Oft An's Blaue Meer" (both of which were ably rendered) might gain by intensiveness of expression, other songs, in which continuous line was important, suffered.

Jesse Lasky Will Put 80 Red Heads in Musical Comedy Film Soon to Be Produced

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service.

Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Nov. 22—Eighty . . . count 'em quickly . . . eighty red heads will be used to attract the tired business men into the theater by Jesse L. Lasky. These gals with Titian tresses are to be a part of "Red Heads on Paradise," a Lasky musical comedy, by Barry Trivers and Joseph Mankiewicz, to go into production almost immediately.

Louella O. Parsons

A little sentiment is attached to the redheads. Years ago, when J. L. was in vaudeville, he took out an act called "Lasky's Redheads." It was a success and it netted him $200,000. That money enabled him to go into the motion picture business and he's hoping the idea will again bring him good luck.

I have never seen anyone as cut up as Richard Dix was over the dealth of his pal, Hugh Trevor. The day Hugh died he and Richard Dix had planned to go to Palm Springs on a holiday to get full of health. I met Richard on the Radio lot two or three days after Hugh had passed on and he couldn't stop sobbing when we spoke of his friend. Almost over night Dix became terribly ill and he is now sick in bed with pneumonia. The minute the fever breaks and he is on the road to recovery, he will be given "The Brave Coward," an original story by Bartlett Cormack, to read. J. Walter Ruben has been signed to direct the story, which we are told is timely.

The much publicized Jean Harlow needs, according to M-G-M, stories that are a bit ultra in motif. The Harlow must play sophisticated roles or else she loses her audience. Metro has, therefore, purchased "Man and Wife," the story of a professional co-respondent, by Beth Brown, and it sounds like Harlow.

Paramount is leaving no stone unturned to make the public ready to receive Charlotte Henry in "Alice in Wonderland." She leaves Saturday with her mother and Ralph Huston, of Paramount's publicity department, for personal appearances in 22 cities. Those who haven't heard of Alice will know her well by the time the picture opens. Tom Bailey will leave his bicycle and his diet at home and act as advance man. He is the boss of Paramount's press department, so you see how important this company feels it is for the dear public to get acquainted with Alice.

Chatter in Hollywood

You must compliment Constance Bennett on her business sagacity. She has taken charge of the Marquis De Falaise's picture, "Lelong" (the Dance of the Virgins), and is stimulating interest by telling everyone what scenic effects Hank was able to get 'way off in Bali, hundreds of miles from civilization. Up to now four companies have sent in requests for La Bennett to show her travelogue but she is waiting until the picture is scored. Connie could give the Wall Street boys a few lessons in financial generalship.

Gloria Stuart didn't have sufficient of what it takes to play a glamorous musical comedy favorite when she first moved in on the Universal lot. That I know because there never was a suggestion that she was suited to play the lead in Edna Ferber's "Glamour," the story of an actress. Dozens of well known actresses were mentioned but the name of Gloria Stuart was conspicuous by its absence. Now I am told that Miss Stuart's first starring vehicle for Universal will will be "Glamour." Denny Zeidman is producing the play and Doris Anderson is writing the screen adaptation.

A Line Or Two

Every so often the ghost of Jesse James bobs up to haunt us. Jesse Weil has signed James' son and granddaughter to play in the "Life of Jesse James," which is now being written by one Grace Elliott. The Dominoes will feed themselves and their friends Thanksgiving at a house warming. Karen Morley has been so busy tending her baby that she has been out of the limelight for months. M-G-M is lending her on her first comeback picture to Paramount for "Shoe the Wild Mare," Gene Fowler's story. You'd know, wouldn't you, that Frank Joyce would sign an actress in Europe? He is bringing back Marcelle Chantal just to give the producers a chance to go for a foreign actress again.

Snapshots of Hollywood

STEPHEN RAPHAEL, London millionaire, surrounded by youth and beauty at the Little Club. The ROBERT LEONARDS hosts at one of the merriest little club parties. MRS. CLARK GABLE extremely smart in brown satin. CLARK doing a special dance number with EDNA MURPHY. She, the JACK GILBERTS, the HARRY BEAUMONTS, and the GABLES at the LEONARD table. The SIDNEY LANSFIELDS (SHIRLEY MASON) hosts at another party. EDITH MAYER GOETZ, in pale blue, one of the most stunning looking young matrons at the party. The FOETZES, the DARRYL ZANUCKS, the RAY GRIFFITHS, the RUFUS LE MAIRES having fun at the Lansfield table. The ROY NEWBERTS entertaining first with a dinner party at their home, then to the Ambassador, to the Little Club. In the Newbert party the GEORGE HEARSTS, BUSTER COLLYERS, RITA KAUFMAN, the SKEETS GALLAGHERS and the RUSSELL MACKS, TOWNSEND NETCHER giving some of the U. S. Fixing the Ties That Bind

Myrna Loy assists Max Baer just before they go into sweet embrace, in this scene from "The Prize Fighter and the Lady," which has its premiere at Loew's State, tomorrow.

Spring in Autumn's Film Masterpiece

Spring Byington, that swell comedienne in "The First Apple," at the Shubert, may soon see herself as others see her —through the eyes of a motion picture camera. She plays the role of Marmee in "Little Women," film masterpiece based on Louisa May Alcott's tale of her Concord girlhood. The picture comes to Keith's this week-end.

Miss Byington plays a straight part in the movie, and it is naught under the high merit of her comic successes on stage.

DEVIR GETS BIG MALDEN VOTE

The long rivalry of Mayor John D. Devir, of Malden, and Former Mayor William A. Hastings will be continued at the municipal elections next Dec. 12, according to complete returns of the primaries held in that city yesterday.

Mayor Devir led a field of six candidates in the mayoralty contest with a total of 5722 votes while former Mayor Hastings polled 2403 votes to assure himself of the other place on the ticket. Both ran far ahead of the other four candidates.

Only 10,156 ballots were cast out of a total of 22,628 registered voters

In the contest for school committee, three years, Mrs. Charlotte E. Wellington, of the Republican state committee, and Probation Officer William J. Kelley were nominated.

Aldermanic contests took place in three of the city's seven wards. In Ward 1, Councilmen Perley L. Davenport and Jere W. Monahan were the victors. In Ward 5, Alderman Sylvester Scribner was defeated in his fight for re-election by Councilman Arthur G. Lovejoy and Soren Willesen.

Councilman Max Rosenblatt and Abe Mogul were the victors in the aldermanic contest in Ward 7.

43,000 Women Join Fishing Ranks

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 22 (INS)—The State Conservation Commission revealed today that upwards of 43,000 women went fishing during the summer months.

"It now seems," said Conservation Commissioner Lithgow Osborne, "that this field of men's activities is to be invaded the same as the barber shop has been entered by members of the fair sex."

Lunchroom Owners Draw U. S. Protest

Resolutions protesting against the proposed restaurant in the Federal building, are being prepared by private restaurant owners in the vicinity to be sent to President Roosevelt. They charge it would constitute "unfair competition" and would take $1000 a day from private lunchrooms.

OFFICER CORBETT TONY KARSIUS

Charged with being one of the trouble-makers in the Norwood tannery strike rioting, Tony Karsius was arrested by Officer James H. Corbett as an auto sped through a rain of stones. He was arraigned with others and held for trial. Later a girl was beaten and a house and garage set afire in strike disorders. (Boston American photo.)

WHITE BEATEN IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Nov. 22—Tabulation of ballots in the municipal primaries here revealed Mayor William P. White had run a poor third in a field of 12 candidates to furnish one of the two upsets in the contests.

The other surprise was the topping of Alderman Thomas F. Galvin, director of public safety, by Peter Carr, defeated by the former for this office two years ago.

Walter A. Griffin, removed as license commissioner by Mayor White early this year, led the mayoralty race in the primaries with a total of 6678 votes. Alderman Robert F. Hancock was also nominated with 4630 votes. Mayor White secured 2905 votes and was eliminated. The election will take place Dec. 12.

In the contest for alderman to be director of public safety, Carr polled 7175 votes and Alderman Galvin, the present incumbent, also nominated, received 5644 votes. Henry J. Moore, runner-up, secured a total of 3323 votes.

Mrs. Massie Soon to Seek Reno Divorce

Washington, Nov. 22 (INS)—With announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Thalia Massie's sister, Rion, to G. Daulton Visknisk of Montclair, N. J., friends today said Thalia's much-discussed trip to Reno for a divorce will not be longer deayed.

Friends insisted that the young matron and her husband could never compose their differences, which had their beginning in the savage attack on Mrs. Massie in Hawaii ,by five natives ,a little over two years ago.

Advice Freely Sought

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Elsie Robinson

I COULD have a swell racket. Even in these lean times, I could make three times as much as I'm now making, with a quarter the work. No more daily drudgery with editors yelling for copy. No more lonely hours racking the weary old bean, while the rest of the world goes bye-bye or ga-ga. Nothing to do but sit in a pretty office and smile and listen and talk to folks as they come in.

Listen, and talk about what?

Listen to folks talk about themselves. Give them advice about themselves. ASKING AND GETTING ADVICE—there's America's favorite, 20th century, indoor sport. GIVING 'EM THE ADVICE THEY ASK FOR—there's America's fattest, 20th century racket.

As a nation, we've suddenly become self-conscious. We want to know how we're made. Why we do things. Having-ourselves-analyzed has become a mania with us.

"WE'RE WISING UP"

Now mind you, I'm not condemning that mania or even joking about it. We should know how we're made. We should know why we do things.

All of which is good medicine. The more sensible questions we ask about ourselves, the more sound advice we get in reply, the better off we'll be—PROVIDED.

Provided what?

PROVIDED WE DO SOMETHING WITH THE ADVICE AFTER WE GET IT.

But there's the hitch! We dote on telling our troubles, asking for advice and getting it. And the tougher the analysis, the rougher the advice, the more we like it!

BUT WHEN IT COMES TO APPLYING THAT ADVICE—PUTTING THOSE TIPS INTO PRACTICAL PERFORMANCE—THAT'S SOMETHING ELSE!

For which, of course, there's a very good reason. Seeking advice is a most delightful new way of gratifying our universal egotism.

WHAT ALIBIS!

But, with the advent of psychology, all this is changed. We realize that it is not only permissible, but necessary, to talk about ourselves. And not only necessary, but a mutually delghtful occupation, since such talk flatters both the advisor and the advised.

Besides all this, what comforting alibis these analyses reveal for our old cowardice and cussedness! Formerly, we had but lame excuses for our laziness and timidity, our silliness and bad temper. Now we can produce Scientific Proof to show how-we-get-that-way.

All of which, as the dumbest can see, is Simply Swell!

So what? So this. We modern Americans know more about ourselves AND DO LESS WITH THE INFORMATION than any generation which has ever inhabited the globe.

Is this, maybe, one reason why we are where we are?

JOHN McCORMACK IS FEATURED ON AIR

Famous Tenor Will Include 'Ave Maria'

By N. F. T.

When ears become slightly if not plumb weary of medicore microphone endeavor, it is good and even comforting to contemplate an easy chair evening, during which the great voice of John McCormack is promised. Tonight holds such program pleasure in store (WBZ) on the 9:30 dot, with some striking selections to be aired by the beloved Irish tenor.

* * *

CLASSIC COMPOSITIONS

An aria from "Euridice," the 17th century opera founded on that Grecian mythology theme of "Orpheus and Euridice," has been chosen for the opening McCormack solo. Among other outstanding vocal classics he will interpret, there looms the soul stirring "Ave Maria" as being broadcast to the concert orchestra accompaniment of music men directed by William Merrigan Daly. Two well-known Schubert songs, namely, "Der Jungling and Der Quelle" in addition to "Candlelight" by Cadman and an old Irish ballad bit called "Nellie My Love and Me" are scheduled to occupy the period of McCormack minstrelsy.

* * *

Another piece also announced in the McCormack group is a sentimental score labeled "Soft Are Your Arms" which contains the words written by Daniel S. Twohig, at present employed in the Everett Postoffice. Mr. Twohig has penned lyrics for numerous similar songs. Artists such as Lawrence Tibbett and Marie Jeritza have approved his work and used many of his operatic creations.

* * *

SMITH SPEAKING

Tomorrow morning brings the voice of Alfred E. Smith again, as the Senate committee on crime control meets in New York. Coast to coast listeners (WNAC) can catch the proceedings between 10 and 10:30 a. m. Senator Royal S. Copeland is also a featured speaker slated for radio remarks.

* * *

No special "guest artists" hold forth to supplement that popular Waring's Pennsylvanians offering tonight (WNAC) at 10 o'clock. It is to be an all-Waring serenade effort.

* * *

Changed time shifts the Alexander Woolcott comment to a 9:15 network niche (WNAC) every Wednesday, effective this evening.

* * *

STILL SEPARATED

Guy Lombardo and his orchestra, furnishing tunes, while Gracie Allen and George Burns afford comedy, contribute their melodious part of the weekly program (WNAC) from Washington at 9:30 tonight. George and Gracie chime in from Hollywood, Cal.

As the Baroness Leopold von Popper, she is a social leader in her native Vienna. Boston is indeed fortunate in being privileged to hear the incomparable Jeritza in this role . . . she will be surrounded by such artists as Pasquale Amato and Franco Tafuro. SAVE YOUR FACE FOR THE FESTIVITIES -:- CHRISTMAS CARDS GO MAD AND MERRY

During Excitement and Fun of Shopping, Skin Routine Is Most Important

By Therese Deschamps

Christmas shopping is lots of fun! But rushing around like mad to find suitable gifts for our friends is tiring business and does take a lot of time. So it's up to us to make a special effort not to neglect our skins during this hectic pre-holiday season.

* * *

At this time of the year most of us wish the days could be twice as long as usual. If they only were perhaps we poor women would have a chance to do the hundred and one extra tasks which must be finished somehow.

* * *

Speaking of skin care, you do not need to spend many precious hours on elaborate beauty treatments. Not at all. Five minutes a day—every day—is all you need.

To keep your skin lovely and free from blemishes the most important thing is to cleanse it thoroughly the last thing EVERY NIGHT.

* * *

No matter how tired you may be after a long day of shopping or working to keep the big bad wolf from the door, resist the temptation to crawl into bed without removing every trace of make-up. Another minute or two for any special treatment your skin may need and you can drift away to dream land with a clear conscience. At least so far as your complexion is concerned.

* * *

If you go to bed with a dirty skin even a few times you are laying the ground-work for all kinds of future complexion ills.

Yet I suspect that a surprising number of women [illegible] you and you—commit this [illegible] at least occasionally. Perhaps even oftener when your engagement book is brimming with interesting parties and teas. And then wonder why in the world you are cursed with [illegible] black heads, enlarged [illegible] and a rough coarse textured skin.

* * *

Give your complexion [illegible] a few minutes of extra care now. Otherwise you may be ashamed of it a few weeks from now when the holiday round of gay parties and festivities begins.

None of [illegible] perfect [illegible] day is [illegible] begin now [illegible] complexion for the [illegible]

Would you [illegible] perfectly marvelous preparation which will help to clear up blackheads, whiteheads, enlarged pores or an oily skin? A nationally famous New York beauty expert recently told us about it. We'll be glad to pass this information along to you free of charge. Beauty Queries

Safe Cosmetics

Question: Where can I write for information concerning various brands of face powder and cream? One sees and hears of so many, yet often someone says "this brand contains this or that ingredient which is harmful."—Mrs. J., Milford

Answer: About the best advice I can give you is to use only cosmetics made by well-known reputable manufacturers. There are plenty of these. It's best to avoid cosmetics which are [illegible] low in price.

Wrinkles

Question: What would you recommend for wrinkles around the eyes, and sagging muscles on my neck? I am a woman of 45, and never had time to think of myself before.—Mrs. A. E. W., East Milton.

Answer: A [illegible] of good [illegible] patted around the eyes nightly with feathery [illegible] fingertips may help to [illegible] these tiny lines.

Sagging necks are often due to poor posture and neglect of the skin. Very dry skins are apt to wrinkle prematurely. Massage your neck and chin nightly with good muscle oil or a rich nourishing cream. We have some excellent suggestions on care of dry skins and a list of creams [illegible] suitable for them. Send [illegible] a stamped self-addressed envelope for [illegible]

Love's Headaches

Many a tired business girl would like to marry, only she feels that she can't afford a husband on her salary.

Men Are Fond of Tavern Pieces

The solid, substantial character of the so-called "Tavern" furniture finds favor with men perhaps because it is reminiscent of the tap rooms of memory now coming into being again with the advent of foaming steins.

Its simulation of hand craftsmanship gives this furniture a sturdy appearance without the decorations which many masculine tastes abhor.

Tavern furniture is shown in occasional chairs, dinette suites and benches. It has a definite place in the furnishing of a bachelor apartment and in apartments of studio type.

It is also in harmony with the type of home seen in New England and is frequently [illegible] the [illegible] American [illegible] English.

It seems evident that as long as English [illegible] homes such as [illegible] the Newtons remain popular there will be a lively demand for Early English furniture. [illegible] modernistic furniture would hardly be recommended by a decorator for a home of this type.

Down through the years there has also been a continuous demand for Colonial furniture which has outlasted various vogues and is still going strong. Part of this may be due to the [illegible] new owners of [illegible] homes [illegible]

Introducing the Torte

By Martha Lee

In [illegible] torte [illegible] all our [illegible] are different [illegible] different from cake [illegible] from pudding but a combination of all three. We didn't [illegible] much about them but now they are so popular they are apt to appear as an utterly delicious finish anywhere in the country from home dinners to fancy parties.

There seems to be some confusion over the name "torte" [illegible] tricks to making [illegible] Since they are of course [illegible] butterless cakes which depend [illegible] the [illegible] of eggs and [illegible] depends more than the actual baking. Tortes keep well [illegible] there should be a serving or two left over [illegible] cake box and serve it later with fresh-made sauce.

Probably the most famous torte is Date Torte. There are many recipes for making it, but of the score on file this one has been found to be easiest, most certain, andm ost delicious.

DATE TORTE

½ cup flour
½ tsp. salt.
1 tsp. baking powder
1 pkg. dates
1 cup nuts
2 eggs
⅓ cup sugar
½ tsp. vanilla

Sift flour, salt and baking powder into a mixing bowl. Mix pitted and sliced dates and coarsely chopped nuts through the flour with fingertips. Beat eggs; add vanilla; beat in sugar gradually; stir in the flour, dates and nut mixture. Bake in a well-oiled shallow pan in a slow oven (325 deg. F.) for 45 to 60 minutes. Remove from pan, cool, cut in squares and serve with whipped cream or ice cream, or cut in cubes and pile in glasses. Nine to 12 servings.

ANGEL ALMOND TORTE

3 eggs
¾ cup powdered sugar
[illegible] cup almonds

What's for the Whatnot

By ANNICE BRINK

THEY'RE IN AGAIN—whatnots—but [illegible] No overcrowding [illegible] but a few [illegible] chosen [illegible] two or three on a shelf [illegible] interspersed among other [illegible] plain favorite books.

Immediately below is a milk-white figurine which I've [illegible] [illegible] and Miss [illegible] the big and little sister [illegible] exquisitely done in white, blue, gold and rose china.

PANDORA TELLS YOU

DEAR PANDORA:

I have been one of your most ardent readers and have at last found myself faced with a problem which it seems to me calls for your sympathetic and expert advice.

I am 18 years old. I have always been very sensitive to interference in my personal affairs but up until the present have not been particularly unwilling to accept my parents' suggestions on matrimonial questions. I am far from impulsive and, as a matter of fact, I had thus far managed to keep free of any serious love entanglements.

By accident and entirely against my will, I have fallen desperately in love with a man seven years my senior. He has a serious and sympathetic nature, and I believe he is entirely capable of mastering his own destiny. He is also sincere and financially fitted to become a husband. More than that I have absolute confidence in him and I feel justified in defying the worldly wisdom of my parents in spite of my love and respect for them.

Please, Pandora, answer this please, as soon as possible as my own judgment has failed me.

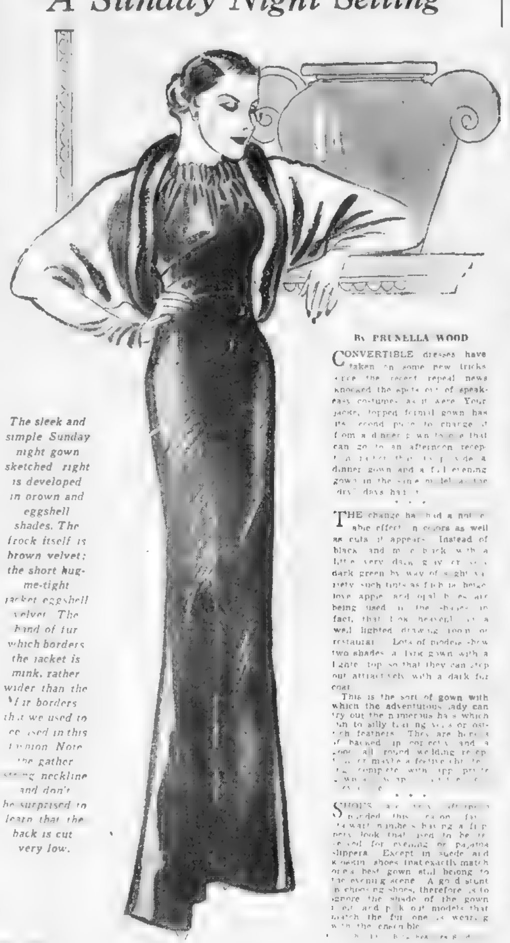
V. T.

DEAR V. T.:

The fact that a man is seven years older than a girl is in itself no serious barrier to happiness in marriage. That old wives' tale is just so much majolica, V. T. But my pet, don't assume from this that I think you are at all justified in defying your good parents in this first affair of the heart. They realize that you are much too young to seriously contemplate matrimony and all the responsibilities it entails. This youthful period which is all too fleeting should be a time of fun and gaiety and irresponsibility for you. Wait a while dear, don't let ANYBODY rush you into marriage until you've looked around a bit and done a little window-shopping first.

PANDORA.

A Sunday Night Setting



The sleek and simple Sunday night gown sketched right is developed in brown and eggshell shades. The frock itself is brown velvet; the short hug-me-tight jacket eggshell velvet. The band of fur which borders the jacket is mink, rather wider than the fur borders that we used to see used in this fashion. Note the gather [illegible] neckline and don't be surprised to learn that the back is cut very low.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

CONVERTIBLE dresses have taken on some new tricks since the recent repeal news knocked the spots out of speak-easy costumes, as it were. Your jacket, topped formal gown has its second piece to change it from a dinner gown to one that can go to an afternoon reception. [illegible] provide a dinner gown and a full evening gown in the same model as the "dry" days had [illegible]

* * *

THE change has had a noticeable effect on colors as well as cuts, it appears. Instead of black and more black with a little very dark gray or very dark green by way of slight variety, such tints as flesh beige, love apple and opal blues are being used in the shapes. In fact, that look heavenly in a well lighted drawing room or restaurant. Lots of models show two shades, a dark gown with a lighter top so that they can step out attractively with a dark fur coat.

This is the sort of gown with which the adventurous lady can try out the numerous hats which run to silly [illegible] or ostrich feathers. They are here [illegible] backed up correctly and a good all round wedding reception [illegible] festive [illegible] complete with appropriate [illegible]

* * *

SHOES are [illegible] regarded this season [illegible] [illegible] numbers having a [illegible] look that used to be reserved for evening or pajama slippers. Except in suede and kidskin shoes that exactly match one's best gown still belong to the evening scene. A good stunt in choosing shoes, therefore, is to ignore the shade of the gown [illegible] and pick out models that match the fur one is wearing with the ensemble.

Office Acquaintances

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Acknowledged

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I work in the Back branch office of a big concern and I have been here for seven years. The president of our firm has never been to this office nor has any of his family with the exception of one son. This boy visited this office about two years ago and was in just between trains. He was recently married and I received an announcement of his marriage [illegible] not an invitation. His bride [illegible] a total stranger to me as is his family. Is it necessary [illegible] that I write [illegible] young couple a note of good wishes in view of the fact that I have never met the girl and only met the boy once about two years ago? If so will you please suggest the wording of such a note and should it be addressed to MR. and MRS. JOHN JONES?

I might add that both men in my office are good friends of the young man's family, and both received invitations to the wedding.

G.

Under the circumstances, which you have so clearly set forth, it would not be a bit necessary for you to acknowledge this formal announcement. It was very courteous and thoughtful of these people to send you an announcement, but I am sure that they regard it as simply a formal way of telling the news and since you know the young man so slightly and the young lady not at all, they would not expect an acknowledgement.

"I said, 'No, he is old enough to know what to do,' and with that I went upstairs. Sheldon called after me, but I don't recall what he said. I went into the dining room and began to read a paper.

"The next think I knew Sheldon came up and hit me with a billiard cue. I don't remember a thing after that."

"Do you remember getting the revolver?"

Mrs. Clark sobbed. "Oh, Lord, no," she burst out suddenly. "You don't think I would have shot him if I did remember what it was all about?"

Mrs. Clark was reported in improved health, although hysterical at times. Her [illegible] was bandaged.

Presumably the notice refers to the destruction in mid air of a huge United States Air Lines plane at Chesterton, Md., on October 11 in which seven persons were killed, among them Miss Dorothy M. Dwyer, of Arlington, who was on her way to wed Theodore Baldwin, a former Boston broker.

BOOTS! BOOTS!

Boots! Boots! Boots! Marching up and down again—and there's no discharge from the dole! But there is. The paraphrasing of Rudyard Kipling's famous poem holds true no longer. There IS discharge from the dole! The boots that tramped the highways and the byways as their wearers sought for work have ceased to march. They are standing still—in line. In line for jobs! Thousands went to work today who had been receiving welfare aid. Thousands more will go to work tomorrow. And thousands more on the day after—and so on until 97,000 men who haven't worked for months and years are at work again in Massachusetts under the civil works administration program. They always wanted to work, those men on the welfare lists. They've got jobs now! Heads up! Pride again! There is pay for those men. This picture was taken at the federal-state employment office in Congress st., Boston, where men were registering for jobs. Jobs!

HUNDREDS IN RUSH SEEKING LIQUOR LICENSES

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

I am not sure but what the Nazi government will come a cropper. If it does come a cropper not because of its political or economic action, nor even of its foreign affairs, but solely because of its stupidity in religious matters. For the moment I am not speaking of the Jews but of the Christians. Although basically the Jewish solidarity is a matter of both religion and race, yet the fact that the Nazi persecution seems primarily racial has rendered the religious angle of the Jewish question less acute.

But Hitler is going to have trouble, too, among his own Christians. Presumably a Catholic himself, he is rendering religions intolerable for both great branches of Christianity. This is to be clearly seen in the despatches which relate the story of the Nazi commemoration of the 450th anniversary of the birth of Martin Luther.

* * *

This is a basic date in the history of Protestantism. It might be thought that what Martin Luther and his generation did in the way of smashing the universality of the Middle Ages and ushering in the modern age of schism and propagation by fission would furnish sufficient ground for celebration by itself. But the Nazis were not content with this. They took pains to draw elaborate parallels between the renaissance of German religious liberty ushered in by Luther and the greater renaissance of all German liberty which the Nazis claim for themselves.

One of the signs of that liberty has been the radical subordination of the Lutheran Church to the Nazi government and its resulting reorganization against the will of a strong and vocal minority. In a way this is good Lutheranism, since the German church has always professed the doctrine that the church must obey the state in other than religious matters. Luther gained his own ends, in the long run, by playing the Catholic princes and the Protestant princes off against one another. His success depended on the support of strong rulers. With that knowledge he betrayed the revolting peasants who, counting on his sympathy, rose against their feudal lords, only to find themselves let down badly by the reformer, who valued the support of the rulers more than that of the people. So, in a way, Lutheranism has only itself to thank if it finds itself under the thumb of a government resolved to make the Christian religion a Germanic, if not a pagan cult.

* * *

Not only that, but the non-Lutheran Protestant churches fear that they, too, will be swallowed up in the Nazi cult. So alarmed have they been that the Nazi government has, apparently, taken the initiative in assuring them that the independence of the Free Churches will be respected.

But there is another, and more surprising development—particularly when you realize that it comes at this time of commemoration of Luther's birth. It is the Catholic attitude. The Catholics have no reason to love Luther. Usually, their resentment at the Reformation concerns itself chiefly with Luther and the part he played. Toward John Calvin, as it has always seemed to me, their feeling is of somewhat grudging respect. Perhaps that is because Calvin indisputably derived from St. Augustine and so is a sort of cater-cousin to the Catholic theologians.

But they recognize that Luther was not entirely an admirable person. He was violent and opinionated, his theories did not always match his practices, he was a skillful politician as well as a moral reformer. The two frequently go together. It is all the more interesting, then, to see that in the present crisis of the Lutheran church the Catholics are making common cause with their Protestant brethren. The chief Catholic newspaper, Germania, covered its front page with an editorial urging the faithful to rally to the support of the Lutherans who were standing against Nazi control within the church and exhorting them to "solemn reflection." It warned the Catholics that they have seen only the beginning of a campaign, not merely against the Church but against Christianity itself. The matter is not one that concerns the Protestants alone. Belief in Christ itself is at stake. The Catholics cannot sit by and let the younger church go down to defeat. Their turn will come next.

* * *

That is why it seems not unlikely that in this religious solidarity against Hitlerism the administration is finding itself split by an entering wedge which may exert unexpected force. Were the Jews, too, to emphasize religious persecution more than they have hitherto done, softening their emphasis on racial discrimination there might be a force of united religious opinion, backed up by sympathizers in the rest of the world, which the Nazis would find far harder to laugh off than the strictly Jewish protests. At any rate, in an age constantly stigmatized as materialistic and nonreligious it is most interesting—however surprising—to find that religion still contains so much dynamite.

The Church, shouting that He hath put down the Mighty from His seat and hath exalted the Humble and Meek, may still be more than a match for Hitler and his heathen.

FRED J. DILLON APPOINTED TO SAYRE'S POST

Ely Secretary Fills Job Temporarily, Dr. Gallagher in West's Place

Gov. Ely today appointed his assistant secretary, Fred J. Dillon, temporarily to fill the position of state commissioner of correction. At the same time he accepted the resignation of Commr. Francis B. Sayre who on Saturday was appointed assistant secretary of state by President Roosevelt.

The temporary appointment was made because of the necessity of Sayre leaving for Washington immediately.

Dillon is a former messenger in the governor's office. Since he became a secretary he has acted for the governor in many penal matters, hearing charges about conditions at Norfolk, and studying for the governor, all the evidence in the famous Gallo-Cero case.

Gov. Ely also sent to the council the appointment of Dr. T. Morton Gallagher, of Newton, associate medical examiner in the seventh Middlesex district, to be medical examiner filling the place vacated by the death of Dr. George L. West.

A plea that she be left alone and defiance to those who are trying to oust her from her post as head of the commissary department of the Four Square Gospel Center was voiced by Mrs. Jessie B. Costello in a sermon from the platform of the church last night.

She charged a group of "professional Christians" was trying to discredit her by using underhand methods but that she would defy them and would not resign her post except on orders of Mrs. Aimee McPherson Hutton.

She chose "Gossip" as the theme of her discourse and spoke of how it had affected her life, not only in this instance but also when she was accused of the poison slaying of her husband.

FOES OF TAVERN THREATENED WITH BAN

Warned of Proposal to Outlaw All Rum Selling by Glass

If opposition to the tavern continues tavern proponents will open a drive to ban all liquor selling by the glass they warned today at the State House.

The threat was made as the hard liquor control bill was having its first reading in the House in the form submitted by the House ways and means committee, with the tavern omitted.

Proponents of the tavern also threatened to stand fast against any bill for mileage or [illegible] form of compensation to the legislators for the special session if the tavern is defeated.

THREAT TO UP-STATERS

There is a bill now in the Legislature to compensate the members and if this is not passed there will be an attempt to get the money for them through high mileage payments.

To legislators from the far reaches of the state, who compose the bulk of the tavern opponents this mileage will mean quite a sum but to the eastern legislators who are the proponents, it will not mean so much, especially the Boston legislators who would receive only $5.

Two amendment notices were filed in the House today as the bill took its reading preparatory to opening of the expected bitter debate tomorrow in morning and afternoon sessions.

TWO AMENDMENTS

Rep. Harold Cole of Taunton filed a notice of amendment providing that all package liquor licensees be required to carry in addition to regular-size packages, the old time one-gill package known in the bygone days as the "nip." This package would contain one-quarter of a pint, or four ounces, two regular drinks.

Rep. Alfred Ingalls of Lynn filed notice of an amendment providing that all druggists licensed to sell liquor must have been in business at least two years prior to date of application for license.

The House will convene at 11 a. m. tomorrow for the first debate session on the bill, which was stripped of the tavern provision in committee by a vote of four Democrats for the tavern and seven Republicans against. Leaders hope to have the bill sent to the Senate by Friday night.

NEW HOARDING FIGHT OPENS

Atty. Edward Spiegel, recently indicted on the charge of hoarding $2000 in gold, today carried his case to the U. S. District Court. Spiegel appealed the decision of Judge Hugh D. McLellan of U. S. District Court, who denied an injunction to restrain U. S. Dist. Atty. Francis J. W. Ford from prosecuting him until the constitutionality of the act has been passed upon by U. S. Supreme Court.

The appeal petition asks the Circuit Court to reverse the ruling of the District Court judge that Spiegel had an adequate remedy at law and did not need to resort to equity.

In his demurrer, Spiegel charges that the executive order, requiring owners of gold to surrender it, is illegal, because it exceeds the power granted the President by Congress. The demurrer further charges the indictment does not constitute an offense under the Constitution; that the Constitution does not give Congress the right to prohibit private ownership of gold coin and that the act violates the Fifth Amendment which stipulates that "No person shall be deprived of his liberty or property without due process of law."

MAYOR PERMITS MINSKY SHOW

The Minsky burlesque show, which City Censor Stanton White disapproved in advance, will open on schedule Friday night at the Park Theater, but,—

Mayor Curley has solemnly warned all concerned that one breach of decency will mean the revocation of the theater's license for one year.

City Censor White, in a letter to Mayor Curley, had recommended that the show be banned, on the ground that shows sponsored by the same persons had been closed up by the authorities in New York.

The censor said they were notorious as so-called "strip" shows, and if too tough for New York, they certainly would not do for local consumption.

MAYOR-ELECT PLANS REST

His election certified by the election commission and conceded by former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols on the completion of the city-wide recount, Mayor-elect Frederick W. Mansfield today declared he was planning to take a short vacation before his inauguration next January.

The recount resulted in a net gain of 698 votes for Nichols but despite this figure Mayor-elect Mansfield still led him by 172 votes when the final count was completed.

A girl secretary from the office of Atty. Barnett Welansky, 43 Tremont st., who was counsel for the late Charles ("King") Solomon, asked for 12 application blanks, six of each kind.

Miss Ada Land, secretary of City Councillor Israel Ruby of Dorchester, called at the offices for three application forms for bottled good.

In the first half-hour after the opening at 8:30 a. m., between 200 and 250 had applied for blanks, and the stream of applicants was steady in the following hours.

"What do you want, for bottled goods or to be drunk on the premises?" asked the clerk of each one.

MANY QUESTIONS

Those who asked for the latter found they [illegible] a form with many questions, among which were the following:

"Do you now call your place of business a tavern?" (No one can hereafter call his place of business a tavern unless he holds a tavern license).

"How high are your booths?" (No booths can be installed unless permission has first been obtained from the board.)

"How far from a school is your building? From a church? From a subway or Elevated entrance? From a playground?"

In the case of clubs, the president and treasurer must sign a statement that no part of the profits from the sale of alcoholic beverages goes for the benefit of any individual.

Another who obtained an application blank today was State Senator Edward Carroll of South Boston.

THAT GIRL FROM NEW YORK -:- By Allene Corliss

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Lovely young Eden Lane and handsome Jerry Evan a banker fall in love on sight. Five years before, following a disastrous love experience Eden had come to New York. She obtained a position with an advertising concern and that, together with the income from her mother's estate, permitted her to live comfortably. After two years in New York she met Jake Pierson, an undemonstrative sort who aroused ardor by his lack of it. He proposed to Eden but while she enjoyed his companionship thoroughly, she did not love him. Following Eden's rejection Jake disappeared. When next she saw him he was married, but his wife had gone to Arizona for her health. Jerry and Eden are finally married in New York and spend a [illegible] Elizabeth [illegible] Jerry's hometown girl friend, is stunned by the news of his marriage. In New York Jake reappears and accompanies Eden and Jerry on a party where [illegible] and Jake has to take Eden home. The next day [illegible] and they go back to Jerry's home town in Vermont to live with his mother.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

She [illegible] close [illegible] gaze of [illegible] long [illegible] was [illegible] [illegible] home. [illegible] bought [illegible] I'm [illegible] to [illegible] been [illegible]

"It's sure a bad time for colds," he agreed, wrapping the bottle in blue paper, tying it expertly with red twine. "I see Jerry Evans is back—he was in here with his wife this afternoon. Gee! She's looking swell, all right. He bought her a bottle of Rene perfume. It's a new odor—Fleur de Lis. Would you like to try some, Miss Prentiss? The small bottles are only a dollar—"

"No, thank you, Johnny—not tonight, I guess." She smiled at him, picked up the aspirin and went out.

It was Sunday morning, it was 8 o'clock, and for the first time in years, well ten of them anyway, Jerry w[illegible] and completely dressed.

"How does it feel, darling?"

"What do you mean—feel?"

"To be up and dressed at 8 o'clock on Sunday morning." [illegible] Eden [illegible] soft [illegible] frills about her slim throat. "Like it?"

Jerry Interrupts Her Progress Downstairs

"Hate it. I'm going to have it out with mother. All darned nonsense our getting up at such an ungodly hour."

"While you're about it, why not have a few other things out with her at the same time?"

"Such as?"

"Well—my smoking, for instance." Eden was busy with a nail file.

"What about your smoking—don't tell me she objects!"

"It would seem she does. She was very pleasant about it but quite explicit. She thinks it not quite—"

"Don't tell me she thinks it not quite nice [illegible]"

"Worse than that, darling — I think she considers it a little, well, vulgar!"

"She didn't actually say that, Eden?"

"No. But I'm sure it's what she thinks."

[illegible] sounded amusing. "But I say, I'll have to put her straight. We can't let her get away with that."

"No, I thought not. It wasn't exactly a cozy outlook? Well, if you're all set, shall we go down?"

"One minute. Aren't you forgetting something, Mrs. Evans?" Jerry [illegible] the doorway, his eyes [illegible]

"Good heavens, what? Don't tell me I'm not completely and properly clothed—"

"Mrs. Evans — whom do you love?"

"Oh, that!"

"No, this!"

Over his shoulder Eden's eyes came in sudden guilty contact with her green leather traveling clock. "Good heavens, Jerry, we've got to run—it's quarter past!"

Julia Evans looked up from an untouched grapefruit. "Good morning. Aren't you a little late? Breakfast is at exactly eight, Jerry."

"Sorry, mother. It's Eden's fault entirely—she's a very lazy person. It took me several hours to convince her you were really serious about our getting up for breakfast—"

Eden Refuses to Take Blame

"On the contrary, Mrs. Evans, it was I who had to convince Jerry——" began Eden bravely but something in Julia's cold blue stare stopped her. She looked at Jerry and shrugged her shoulders helplessly, with a rather gentle resignation. Her eyes meeting his, said, "You see—you can't be frivolous with her. She doesn't like it."

Jerry [illegible] into his chair and attacked his grapefruit. A few minutes later he remembered something. He [illegible] and said, with a rather [illegible] casualness, "By the way, mother, about Eden's smoking——"

"Well," prompted his mother evenly, when for no accountable reason he seemed to have difficulty in going on, "what about Eden's smoking?"

"Why, you see, it's like this. Eden's always smoked. That is, for years anyway and——"

"And what?"

"Well I don't see why she should stop now. I mean, you can't exactly expect her to, can you?"

"I not only can, but strangely enough, I do." Julia was smiling a little. Her blue eyes were calmly, pleasantly fixed on Jerry. "You see, my son, there is something very obnoxious to me about a woman smoking. I dare say, I'm old-fashioned and narrow-minded but at my age you can hardly expect me to change. What Eden has done in the past or chooses to do in the future is entirely her own affair. But so long as she is a guest in my house, I must ask her to consider my wishes."

"But, mother——"

"Please, Jerry." Eden's voice was clear and decisive. "Your mother is absolutely right, you know——"

"Then—shall we say no more about it?" Julia was dismissing the subject pleasantly but definitely.

Jerry shrugged his shoulders, [illegible] that he had been rather [illegible] and was grateful [illegible] the rest of the meal to [illegible] He didn't want [illegible] then the [illegible] was sure to [illegible] him.

"Do you think," he asked her forlornly, following her upstairs a little later, "that she expects we're going to church with her every Sunday?"

"My good fellow, I not only think it, I know it. Tell me, Jerry, do I look quite all right? Hat on straight? Mouth on straight? Eyes properly humble and devout?"

CONTRACT BRIDGE TECHNIQUE -:- By Josephine Culbertson

Slam Bid as Sacrifice Turns Out to Be a Paying Policy in Some Instances

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When a player makes a slam bid as a sacrifice, it is rare indeed that he finds himself, at the end of the hand, writing a score below the line, as Contract players usually have a clear enough idea of the trick-taking power of the combined hands before a slam contract is undertaken to know whether or not they can take 12 of the 13 tricks. Sacrificial overbidding [illegible] limits the sacrifices he makes to hands where the penalties are not [illegible] the opponents [illegible] better than their own [illegible], but the fact remains that a sacrifice seldom turns out to be a real slam.

North and South in the hand below felt quite well satisfied that East and West, who were vulnerable, could fulfill the contract they had undertaken, and thus when [illegible] it was [illegible] but a modest penalty, which seemed all that was probable in view of the partnership bidding, with well worth while.

West, Dealer.

North:
♠ 7 5 4
♡ K 9 8 6
◇ 7
♣ K 8 6 3 2

West:
♠ A K J 10 3
◇ A K Q J 6 3 2
♣ 5

East:
♠ Q 9 8 6 2
♡ 7 5 2
◇ 10 9 8 4
♣ A

South:
♡ A Q J 10 4 3
◇ 5
♣ Q J 10 9 7 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♡ (1)	3 ♡ (2)	3 ♠ (3)
4 ♡	4 N T (4)	Pass	5 ♠ (5)
5 ♡ (6)	7 ♠	Pass	Pass
7 ♡ (7)

East and West vulnerable.

West's opening bid was certainly a bedrock minimum, vulnerable, but from that point on the bidding proceeded naturally enough up to the point where North decided upon the sacrifice. As a matter of fact, East and West cannot make five spades if South, after opening his singleton club and ruffing the return of that suit, leads a diamond and gives North a ruff. Equally, an opening lead of a diamond, which, it must be confessed, would be somewhat of a Double Dummy proposition, would defeat East's contract 2 tricks. However, all this involves rather difficult card reading and requires just the distribution that existed to bring it about.

North could not see these possibilities, and so chose to take what he considered would probably be a light penalty. West, with the Ace-King of diamonds, felt that his patience was being sorely tried and so doubled the six-heart bid.

That contract, it is, of course, apparent as the cards lie, is certain to be defeated if West opens a spade, but having as he thought the better Opening lead of the diamond King, he led that card, which was ruffed in the Dummy, and thereupon South took the remaining tricks.

UNDERSTANDING

Never seek too much to know
  Of another's plight.
Was his trouble or his woe
  Caused by faulty sight?
Was his folly all to blame
For his present hour of shame?
Stretch to him a helping hand
Pity him and understand.

None so wise and none so sure,
  None so perfect strong
As to call himself secure
  From the price of wrong.
Hunger tappeth at the gate,
Let your word of counsel wait;
Share the food at your command
Pity him and understand.

Sorely tempted, morals fail
  Oft to keep the right,
Men at best are very frail.
  Many a sorry sight
By a happier chance had found
Footing firm on higher ground.
Seeing him on treacherous sand
Pity him and understand.

He who for another's aid
  Never has to plead,
Hungry, broken or afraid,
  Is fortunate, indeed!
Let your heart go out to them
Whom your reason would condemn,
Stretch to them a helping hand.

Guard Sacro-Iliac Joint

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

The story accurately portrays the torture endured by a victim of this disorder. Though the author is not a physician, he clearly distinguishes between the sufferings from rheumatism, lumbago, neuritis and the excruciating pain of sacro-iliac strain.

The sacro-iliac joint is the point of articulation between the lowest portion of the spine and the hip bone. Because of its position, this joint is easily dislocated, strained or injured.

The damage can usually be traced to a fall, a sudden twist or blow. It may follow sudden lifting of a heavy object, but also it may result from the most trivial of exertion.

Sacro-iliac strain is a common affliction of overweight individuals. It may occur in persons whose occupation requires standing, walking or sitting in uncomfortable positions.

The pain in an acute attack of sacro-iliac strain may be so severe as to require the administration of an opiate. Sitting or lying in bed even may be painful and the sufferer prefers to stand. The upright position may be the only one in which relief is obtained. The pain is excruciating and as a rule passes down the back of the thigh into the calf of the leg. Occasionally it may travel to the toes.

In most cases pain is relieved by immobilizing the strained joint. This is done by strapping the back with adhesive plaster. It is best to start from one hip and extend the adhesive to the opposite hip. Then start from the opposite side and continue until the several layers of adhesive plaster overlap. This gives support to the back and prevents further strain on the joint.

Whenever possible, it is advisable to resort to complete rest in bed for several days. I have known sufferers from this trouble to complain of pain for several weeks. They were only relieved of their distress by going to bed and having complete rest. Prolonged rest minimizes the strain on the inflamed joint and hastens complete recovery.

Thoughts on Yale's New Bulldog Mascot: Memorial to Itchy ↕ A Divine Calling That May Not Be Counterfeited

By AUSTEN LAKE

I reject the absurd boast of Yale's Athletic Association that Dour Duruna, the new varsity mascot, is the homeliest bulldog in the world. That is rank contum . . . contumn . . . it is pure bunk. Because the ugliest bulldog on earth is Sergeant Jiggs of the Quantico Marines, and I say this without having seen this Dour Duruna, which is a sissy name for a bulldog anyway.

Also, you do not go out and hire a mascot at a moment's notice, just because a couple of the boys get to weeping into their beer in some New Haven thirst parlor and maybe say, "What Yale needs is a good bulldog." For the business of mascoting is an inspirational matter, wherein your true mascot would turn up his patent leather snoot at sordid commercialism and, like as not, refuse to mascot for a damn, out of sheer perversity.

Now, I will name you a mascot that was born to the calling, a moth-eaten, mustard-colored little tyke of mixed parentage that fell in with the file closers one day while Co. B, 304th Tanks, was route marching north of Langres, France, in June of 1918. He was a dingy, matted mutt with a ripple of bony ribs and a corkscrew tail as he fetched step beside an angular Georgia corporal named Slim Dwyer.

Slim was one of those rare, surly ruffians with a brittle temper and a vicious fondness for the canteen of cognac that he kept swinging from his belt. He was pretty much shunned by the best society of Co. B because he was addicted to rapping you a knuckly clout on the side of the skull with virtually no reason, and so was forced to do his drinking privately in the more untidy buvets of the town. I mean that he was an abandoned, unruly outlaw against the company fellowship and was a frequent guest in the Battalion brig.

Itchy-Pants Enlists for the Duration

Well, for the most part of the morning Slim resented being adopted by Itchy pants, as we later christened the mutt, and he took malicious amusement in squirting thin dribs of tobacco juice at the little tyke, who took the target practice in good part with a brisk flirt of his corkscrew tail. But I noticed at noon when the company fell out beside the rolling kitchens that Slim covertly shared his messkit of slum and leather bread with the little dog, snarling profanely the while.

Slim had one particular hate in the company, a blocky-shouldered private named Marty Barry who had been a Maine lumberman in civil life and was used to swinging his heavy boots and 10 pound fists in cook shack brawls. It was something of a privilege to see the two stripping off bits of each other's bark, and we by standers used to marvel that the human anatomy was durable enough to withstand such hard wear. Between times they blistered each other with vivid insults, so that Barry, who was a cheery brute with a bashed, button nose and a great gaping grin, would often rehearse his abusive phrasing with the aid of his billetmates, before turning it loose on Slim. And some of his quips were bits of masterly rhetoric, which would fairly splash as they hit and set the files within earshot into gleeful roars, until an officer would bellow "Quiet in the ranks."

Gradually the pup, Itchy-pants, so-called for his habit of frisking his stern for fleas, absorbed Slim's starved affections and Slim would spend some of his liquor money for snacks of raw butcher's meat for the mutt. And once he drew a week on the rock pile for snatching a rabbit's carcass from a French farmer's shutter to give Itchy-pants a change of diet.

But Itchy was on good terms with all the company and I suspect that he saved our sanity during the hideous grind of training. Finally the company clerk wrote him a non-com's warrant, which Lieut. Beazy out of good nature signed, and which read, "Whereas, by authority of Congress, the mutt, known as Itchy-pants, or Itchy by common usage, shall henceforth hold the rank of sergeant, with disciplinary power over inferior grades . . ." It was a direct slur at Slim, who was thus outranked by his own dog. But for once, Slim cracked his lean, sun-bitten pan in a warped smile, the only smile we ever saw, and he got a castoff pair of sergeant's stripes and hung them around Itchy's neck with a shoestring.

Itchy Takes on Immortality

Well, things went along this way until one July night, the battalion loaded its gear and whippet tanks on trucks and moved off to the Argonne, with Slim, who was a gunner, fixing a comfortable berth for Itchy on the driver's cushion. As the tanks moved into their camouflage under the American batteries west of Verdun, a hellish drum fire was being laid on the Heinie wire, and we could see by the night flares that Slim had wrapped the whimpering Itchy in his shelter half while drinking out of a big bottle.

Our zero came this next morning at quarter past five and we rolled over in echelons, Slim slung in the turret strap in the last tank of No. 1 squad, the mutt between his knees. It was tough going across that shell-pitted terrain, and the cartridge racks jabbed into your ribs while the breech of the 37mm. gun wanged against your helmet. There was brisk action, too, with one of the caterpillars bogging down in a big sink hole and lurching slowly under water. Another, carrying a cask of gasoline strapped to its tailpiece, suddenly became a hideous torch with a pillar of flame and black smoke climbing into the sky. A third lost its turret in a blinding flash, leaving a ragged tangle of steel with the left tread warped overhead like a great spine.

Plainly it was not our dish and, after a bit, we turned back, leaving a scattering of shattered wrecks studding the distance. It was then that we noticed Itchy dragging painfully through the pitted muck, with a crimson splash across his hind quarters and part of his curly tail gone. And the man who ran crouching and skidding through the muck to meet him was Marty Barry. Only, as Marty came sliding near, Itchy wheeled and started yipping back toward the lines. "Slim must a got it bad," said a red-headed sergeant. But by this time Marty had passed Itchy and was slithering through the shell holes toward the gully where most of our hulks were left. Somehow he found Slim, or what remained of him, and packed him in on his back, still breathing but sinking rapidly. He died on the way to a field station. So did Itchy. And we gave them both a soldier's burial, wrapped in the same canvas.

So I say, you don't hire a mascot just out of hand, because the business of mascoting is a divine calling not likely to be bought at a sordid price. Me, I would not give a copper clacker for your patent leather mascots that are drafted into service. Itchy's is a sacred calling.

Blake, Injured Eagle, to Face Crusaders

Encouraging news for Boston College is that Tom Blake will be fit for service for the Holy Cross game on Dec. 2. The hard running halfback whose play was outstanding against the Eagles' early season opponents has been favoring a shoulder injury since the Fordham game at the Polo Grounds but according to Dr. [illegible] Dodvin, team physician, the damage is fully repaired [illegible] ready and fit for stiff duty.

In fact Coach McKenney stated today that Blake could have played against Western Maryland [illegible] Saturday if it were deemed necessary. However, the flock of backs employed proved capable of handling the assignment in [illegible] fashion so that McKenney [illegible]ered it wiser to give the [illegible] shoulder the benefit of additional rest.

On account of the long layoff since playing against the [illegible] it is unlikely that Blake will start against the Crusaders.

FREITAS QUARTERBACK

The B. C. coaches are facing a problem in formulating a starting lineup. If McKenney adheres to his present plans which are subject to changes as individuals show up well in the coming week of practice sessions, Johnny Freitas will return to quarterback with the rest of the backfield quartet being comprised of Ed "Jake" Driscoll, Capt. Frank Maloney and Bobby Ott.

Doubt still exists in McKenney's mind as to the best [illegible] giving Paul Flaherty and Ed Driscoll.

The [illegible] could be mustered [illegible] Freitas [illegible] paired [illegible] Flaherty seems to be [illegible] logical candidate for signal calling honors in the event that anything happens to Freitas [illegible] the [illegible] coaches [illegible] to risk using him in the game [illegible]

The [illegible] are expected of Flaherty [illegible] his excellent showing has been done in scrimmage sessions. His only real opportunity to shine was in the game with Boston University and what he could do under the stiff pressure of major competition is still to be ascertained.

DOUGAN STARTER

Driscoll, McKenney has found, works best when inserted at a later stage. He was easily the hardest running back of the [illegible] with Western Maryland, and will be expected to carry much of the ball carrying burden in the season's finale.

Gen. Sherill Urges A. A. U. to Drop Fight for Jews

Washington, Nov. 22 (AP)—Protest against passage of a resolution by the American Olympic Association threatening withdraway of the United States team from the 1936 games at Berlin was voiced today by Brig. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill at the quadrennial meeting.

General Sherill, American member of the International Olympic committee, declared the resolution would do more harm than good in Germany and elsewhere and suggested that it be amended to make it merely a protest.

Following adoption of the resolution by the A. A. U. A. cablegram was received from O[illegible] associates in Germany [illegible] the pledge given [illegible] committee at Vienna [illegible] no discrimination [illegible] German athletes of Jewish faith.

Following Sherrill's protest against the resolution in its present form Charles L. Ornstein, representative of the Jewish Welfare Board, demanded that the [illegible] either take positive action or none at all.

Ornstein presented a list of 40 alleged examples of Nazi discrimination against Jewish athletes since the Vienna meeting.

Woburn Boy Wins Skypiece for Scoring Touchdown

Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP)—M[illegible] McDonough, the sophomore [illegible] from Woburn, Mass., who ran 80 yards for a touchdown in Colgate's 13 to 3 victory over Syracuse Saturday, today was wearing a hat for the first time this fall.

McDonough, working his way through college, couldn't afford a hat and he wanted one to cover his curly locks this winter. Coach Andy Kerr has a standing offer to give a hat to any player who makes a touchdown in a major game. So Marty stepped out and won himself a hat.

"Buying a hat never gave me more pleasure," said Kerr as he made the purchase today.

Al Welch 'Victim' Of Publicity Backfire

By WALTER KILEY

A petition demanding that Al Welch be retained as track coach at Boston University was today being circulated among the undergraduate students at Boston University.

Several prominent athletes at B. U. feel that Welch is being "ganged against" in the request that he resign from his present position which he has held for the past two years.

The committee which has taken on itself the task of getting sufficient signatures to warrant consideration for Welch's retention will turn in the complete list of signed names to the Faculty Council on [illegible] athletics which is to convene on Friday afternoon for the purpose of hearing Welch's defense.

The faculty committee headed by Dean Frederick Rand Rogers gave Welch one week to prepare his case but Welch has signified that he will fight it out with the B. U. authorities and will stand by his one year contract which does not expire until next June.

POPULAR AS COACH

It is said that Welch is very popular with the track forces which turned out in large numbers for his squad last year. In fact the largest number of boys ever to report for the B. U. track squad is now ready to turn out in the event that Welch returns to his regular duties.

Last season Welch was assistant to Dean Rogers in the latter's capacity as director of physical education. He journeyed from school to school applying Rogers' system on health, weighing and measuring the students and charting the results attained.

He was relieved of this role in the economy drive which sounded the death knell to the coaching staff of Myles Lane and Tiny McMahon in favor of the the Dr. Harmon regime.

WHELTON STORY BACKFIRE

Welch's present troubles arise from the fact that he is employed as a B. U. correspondent for one of the local dailies. It is claimed that he started the present situation in football at B. U. by broadcasting the Billy Whelton incident, the aftermath of the recent games with Tufts.

It is further stated that he is instrumental in inserting unfavorable comment in the B. U. News against the athletic administration and that he is thereby detrimental to the best interests of the college.

The student body is in large part of different mind and will attempt to so [illegible] by means of today's petition.

HARVARD PLANS PASSING GAME AGAINST ELI

Twice-beaten Yale meets twice-beaten Harvard at Cambridge on Saturday but it wouldn't make any difference if they'd lost all their previous games. This is the one [illegible].

[illegible] done, the experts rarely are willing to install either [illegible] Crimson a decided favorite. All that has gone before can be tossed out as irrelevant.

There'll be no heavy [illegible] either way, although Yale, with perhaps a slight edge in the line, appears the stronger [illegible]. The Elis have beaten Maine, Washington and Lee, Brown and Dartmouth while losing to Army and Georgia. Harvard has won from [illegible] New Hampshire, Lehigh and Brown while losing to Dartmouth and [illegible] 12 to [illegible] Holy Cross and Army.

COMBS AT END

On comparative scores alone there is little or nothing to choose between the two. Harvard outplayed Dartmouth by a wide margin but got only a 7-7 tie. Yale was outplayed by the Indians, but won 14 to [illegible]. The Elis topped Brown 14 to 6 while Harvard trimmed the same outfit 12 to 6. Yale bowed to Army 21 to 0, while the Cadets ran up a 27 to 0 count on Harvard. On these three games Yale's apparent margin over the Crimson consists of a touchdown and three extra points.

Harry Combs, a junior from Denver, still held the left end post which he wrested from Jack H[illegible]. Combs was regarded as a certain starter Saturday. Of the backfield men, Capt. Bob Lassiter and Bill Keesling were especially impressive against the scrub.

LANE INJURED

Harvard meanwhile worked out in a long but hard drill in which [illegible] stressed speed and the perfect execution of fundamentals. Some concern was felt over the condition of Frank Lane, halfback, and Art Cheek, end. Lane hobbled about with the aid of a walking stick but Cheek did not even report for practice.

With Harry Wells, Capt. Jeremy Lee and Bob Hayes [illegible] in the starting backfield, Harvard will have three able forward passers to depend upon. Crimson scouts have indicated some weakness in Yale's [illegible] against air raids and Harvard [illegible] with tough [illegible].

Stadium Sellout for Classic Seen

Harvard Stadium will be filled [illegible] first and only time this season on Saturday, according to indications at Cambridge today. The Harvard-Yale game [illegible] promise of being the only sellout of the 1933 season.

The Harvard A. A. reported today that nearly 50,000 tickets had been sold, and the number of pasteboards remaining on hand was [illegible] less than 10,000. Of the [illegible] disposed, Yale has [illegible] 14,000. Six thousand [illegible] seats sent to New [illegible] been returned to the [illegible].

For the first time this year, also, [illegible] speculators made their appearance in Harvard sq. Prices among the specs were offered as [illegible] a pair for seats along [illegible] of play. The specs lined Massachusetts ave. from Harvard [illegible] H. A. A. ticket offices at [illegible] tempting the students [illegible] their fancy offers, the best prices that have been offered in three years; though far below the top boom year prices of $75 per pair.

McCoy Would Have Rival Timekeepers

Al McCoy, Northeastern coach, has sent an unusual recommendation to Bill Bingham of Harvard in the latter's capacity on the football rules committee. McCoy suggests that rival timekeepers be installed on the sidelines seated together with the stop watch in their mutual care. The referee would be required to signal them when time was [illegible] and started. McCoy figures that this system would relieve the field judge of his duties in this respect and would tend toward more accurate accounting of the precious minutes.

'FOOTBALL LOSING CROWD APPEAL FAST'---BILL BRODERICK

SALEM MENTOR HITS STRESS ON DEFENSE

By BILL CONNELL

"Football has lost color during the past few years," said Coach Bill Broderick of Salem High today. "Defensive football has become so strong that it is several steps ahead of the attack.

"Offensive football, even when staged by some team weak on defense, pleases the fans, so unless steps are taken to help the offense or weaken defense, the game is in danger of losing many followers in the near future."

Broderick, dean of school coaches and one of the greatest football teachers in the country, is authority for any statement on football. He has been coaching since 1904 and now [illegible] at Salem. His teams always are leaders, and each year have included boys of All-Scholastic caliber. Dozens of his players have become college stars.

This season [illegible] lost but one game, and that to Everett which has been beaten only by Malden. Salem conquered Lynn G. E., Keith Academy, New Bedford Vocational, lost to Everett, beat Newburyport, Medford, Lynn English. Lynn Classical comes on Saturday, and Beverly on Thanksgiving concludes the campaign.

CLASS THROUGHOUT

The Witches have class, through the line and backfield. Capt. Charley Dolan, 175-pound center, ranks with the finer pivots. Smart, fast afoot, his rugged physique and fighting heart have made him a standout all season. Can play other positions, including backfield, if needed. A [illegible]

Al Gerek and Art Turcotte are left and right ends respectively. Both [illegible] and good receivers. Their catching ability is useful, with so fine a tosser in action as Quarterback Bill Peckham, who can hurl accurately more than [illegible] yards. And is a canny, resourceful field general as well.

Fullback Timmy Mavrakos is considered the best back of the season. A fine kicker, carrier, blocker, pass catcher, and defensive star. Weighs 165, is of medium height, and solid build.

MAYOR'S SON SUB

The squad, now [illegible] strong, includes some fine replacements. There are Bill Bates (son of Salem's mayor; will star next year), Isidore Hincman, Charley Driscoll, Stan Graczwicz, Chris Vasilokopolous and Martin Donovan. Chas. Donovan is a nephew of assistant Coach Marty Donovan, Broderick's righthand man. Vasilokopolous, 6-1, 175 pounds, could be a great wing if he put more drive into his work.

Ben Flanders and Martin Millard, tackles; Joe Porkoski and Ed O'Leary, guards; Art St. Charles and Ellsworth Annis, centers; (Annis also is a back), Louis Chaput, Simon C[illegible], George Levaesseur, John Fay, Leonard Gibbons, Robert Gibbons, John Mac Coona, Richard Ikonide, Ross Chepeleff, Leon Cawley, John Briggs, Ted Georgelakis, Roger Jalbert, "Tiger" Rogers and John Welch, halfbacks, are other subs.

Salem's gridmen are among the best equipped. Broderick knows what boys need for outfits, and he demands that protective gear be the finest possible to buy. When manufactured gear does not suit his requirements he designs equipment and has [illegible].

Then, his boys properly fitted out, he proceeds to build a fine eleven with the aid of Donovan and Glenn O'B[illegible], who works with the seconds.

For, regardless of what other teams may accomplish each year, it always is a forgone conclusion that Broderick's team will be up near the top.

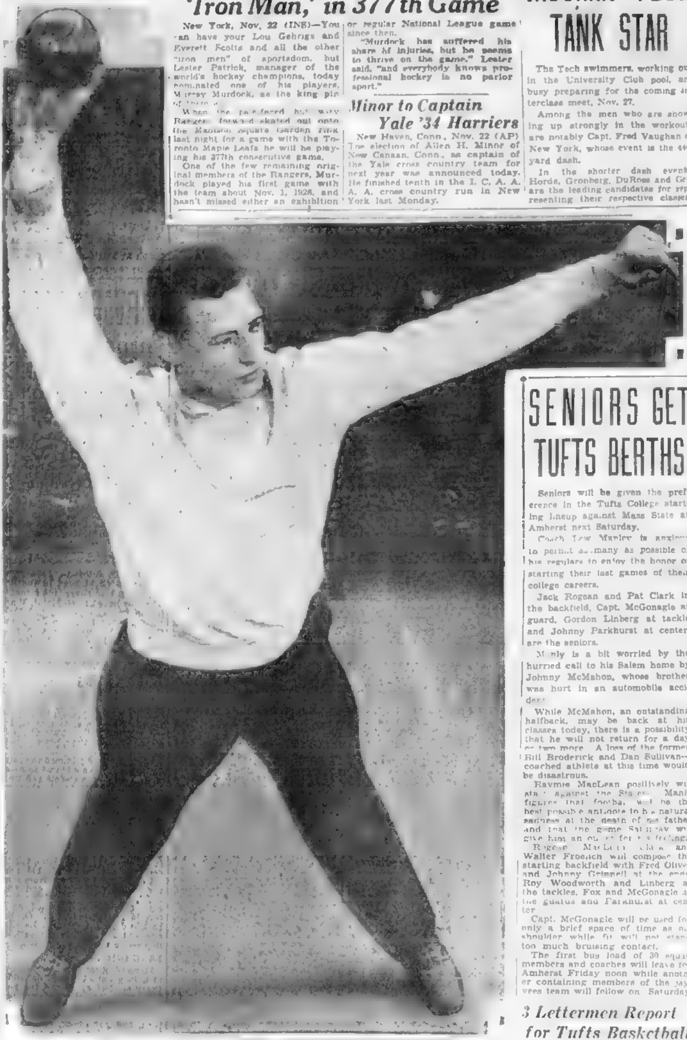
I. C. Champ?



Dimitri Zaitz was an interscholastic shot put champion at Boston English High. Later at Huntington School. Jack Ryder says he will be the next intercollegiate champion. Dimmy has been starring on the varsity football team at the Heights all fall. Hasn't had much chance to practice shot putting. Yet stepped out in the interclass meet, without togs, took one put and won the event. Did nearly 45 feet. Ryder says he will do 50 feet when he swings into regular practice. Weighs 203 pounds. Pretty good hammer thrower and discus man, too. And a top-notch guard. As Holy Cross will find out next week. Only a sophomore. Should be in headlines for several years to come.

Murray Murdock, Hockey's 'Iron Man,' in 377th Game

New York, Nov. 22 (INS)—You can have your Lou Gehrigs and Everett Scotts and all the other "iron men" of sportsdom, but Lester Patrick, manager of the world's hockey champions, today nominated one of his players, Murray Murdock, as the king pin of them all.

When the pale-faced but wiry Ranger forward skated out onto the Madison Square Garden rink last night for a game with the Toronto Maple Leafs he will be playing his 377th consecutive game.

One of the few remaining original members of the Rangers, Murdock played his first game with the team about Nov. 1, 1926, and hasn't missed either an exhibition or regular National League game since then.

"Murdock has suffered his share of injuries, but he seems to thrive on the game," Lester said, "and everybody knows professional hockey is no parlor sport."

Minor to Captain Yale '34 Harriers

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 22 (AP)—The election of Allen H. Minor of New Canaan, Conn., as captain of the Yale cross country team for next year was announced today. He finished tenth in the I. C. A. A. A. A. cross country run in New York last Monday.

VAUGHAN TECH TANK STAR

The Tech swimmers, working out in the University Club pool, are busy preparing for the coming interclass meet, Nov. 27.

Among the men who are showing up strongly in the workouts are notably Capt. Fred Vaughan of New York, whose event is the 440-yard dash.

SENIORS GET TUFTS BERTHS

Seniors will be given the preference in the Tufts College starting lineup against Mass State at Amherst next Saturday.

Coach Lew Manley is anxious to permit as many as possible of his regulars to enjoy the honor of starting their last games of their college careers.

Manly is a bit worried by the hurried call to his Salem home by Johnny McMahon, whose brother was hurt in an automobile accident.

While McMahon, an outstanding halfback, may be back at his classes today, there is a possibility that he will not return for a day or two more. A loss of the former Bill Broderick and Dan Sullivan-coached athlete at this time would be disastrous.

Raymie MacLean positively will start against the Staters. Manly figures that football will be the best possible antidote to his natural sadness at the death of his father and that the game Saturday will give him an outlet for his feelings.

Rogean, MacLean, Clark and Walter Froelich will compose the starting backfield with Fred Oliver and Johnny Grimnell at the ends, Roy Woodworth and Linberg at the tackles, Fox and McGonagle at the guards and Parkhurst at center.

The first bus load of 30 squad members and coaches will leave for Amherst Friday noon while another containing members of the jayvees team will follow on Saturday.

3 Lettermen Report for Tufts Basketball

Capt. Dick Cochran, Clark Ingraham and James Kavanaugh were the lettermen reporting for the Tufts College varsity basketball team which started practice yesterday.

At present the squad is in charge of Arthur Cochran, jayvees coach, who will be succeeded by Lew Manley after the football season closes Saturday. New men making bids for the [illegible] include Frank Davis, Larry Franks, Kenneth McKillop, John Mayo, Joe Richmond and F[illegible] Lewis.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I HOPE TONY SHUCCO of the North End does not give too much attention to the remarks of Jack McCarthy of Roxbury. The latter says Lou Brouillard will knock Shucco out inside of six rounds in their bout at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

Mr. Boston

I cannot see anybody knocking Shucco out inside of six heats. Not even the heavyweights.

"I have been boxing with Lou Brouillard at the rate of $20 a day," says McCarthy. "When I signed for the job, I thought it was a soft touch. I now regret having taken the job."

The thought of McCarthy saying he wished he had not agreed to box with Brouillard for $20 a day is amusing. The fellow likes to fight so much that he would battle for nothing if necessary. In fact they tell me that Jack has furnished some of his best battles when there hasn't been a box office.

It is natural that McCarthy should get a bit enthusiastic about an opponent who will stand up and trade blows with him. Jack usually has to chase a ring rival 100 miles before he can get within punch range.

I know McCarthy will forgive me for disagreeing with his opinion about the probable ending of Friday night's bout. Write it in your book that Brouillard cannot stop Shucco within six rounds, and if I am wrong come in and tell me how little I know about the boxing game.

Perhaps I rate Shucco too highly, because he outpointed Maxie Rosenbloom and stopped Tuffy Griffiths. I may have ducked too many punches from my safe perch in the press row. And have lost my old touch in doping fights.

I'm not saying who is going to win Friday night's bout, but I do stick to my claim that nobody is knocking out Shucco inside of six rounds. I do not think even McCarthy could do that. And Jack is a better swatter than Brouillard.

Numa Also Makes Claim

LEO NUMA who happens to be a challenger for the heavyweight wrestling crown has a few ideas about himself.

"I shall pin Ed Don George when we meet in our title battle at the Garden a week from Thursday night" said Leo "I have wrestled George twice and he was lucky to win each time. In our last match I scored the first fall. I had George on the way to defeat when I missed a flying tackle and injured my head and neck. George cannot always have all the luck"

I believe wrestlers, as well as some of the fans, forget that George knows quite a bit about wrestling as well as being a bit lucky. He was an amateur and Olympic champion before he entered the professional game. The average former college star enters the wrestling game with a rugged constitution, a flying tackle and a desire to keep out of a bread line.

George was schooled in wrestling when in college. This is why he wraps up so many of the former college heroes who think they are mat sensations. Anybody who underrates George is going to be surprised.

Madden Has the Goods

I LIKE DICK Madden as a heavyweight boxing prospect. He showed remarkable improvement in his boxing against Unknown Winston. I thought a draw would have been a good decision.

Increased weight is largely responsible for the improvement in Madden's work. When he invaded New York a couple of years ago he only weighed 165 pounds. He wasn't rugged enough to battle front line heavyweights. Madden weighed 185 pounds against Winston. He boxed well, hit sharply and took punches like nobody's business.

Chicago Test to Klein as 'One-Park' Hitter

By JOE CASHMAN

Chicago took Al Simmons' reputation as a batting champion for a ride, placed it squarely on the spot and erased it so completely that the diamond at Comiskey Park is now being re-angled, at considerable expense, in an effort to revive the corpse.

Will Charlie 'Chuck' Klein, leading batsman in the National League, suffer the same fate in the Windy City?

Though Wrigley Field, "Chuck's" future home as a Cub, is better adapted to his stick style than was Comiskey Park to Simmons' stance, smart baseball men will give you [illegible] odds that Klein will not burn up the circuit with his slugging next season.

They made the same wager against Simmons when he went to Chicago, but for an entirely different reason.

They figured that the vastness of Comiskey Park and the high wind which is usually blowing against the batter out there would lick Al when he had to play 77 games on the orchard. They never for a moment questioned his ability as a hitter or credited it to the not-too-spacious Shibe Park in Philadelphia where he had gained his reputation. He had consistently pinned back the ears of the classiest rival hurlers on every park in the loop.

ONE PARK HITTER

They do, however, entertain [illegible] whether Klein can shine as a slugger anywhere except in the Baker bandbox in Philly, the only major league home he has known thus far.

And they'll bet he can't, even though it's not uncommon for a fair left-handed hitter to pop drives into the low rightfield stands at Wrigley Field and Babe Ruth has knocked the apple clear over the seats at the deepest point and into the street beyond.

The answer is that "Chuck," despite his .359 average for six years and his flock of home runs, extra-base blows and runs driven in every season as a Phil, has never shaped up as a dangerous hitter away from the Quakers' Tom Thumb orchard, which ought to be turned over to Singers' Midgets.

The writer can recall the right-handed Simmons driving a home run into the distant rightfield stands at Braves Field, but he can't remember the left-handed Klein ever coming close to performing the feat. In fact, a lucky single a game has been Chuck's average speed at the Wigwam.

Even at the Polo Grounds, where the foul sticks are almost as close to the plate as in Baker Bowl, "Chuck" has never knocked down any fences.

.200 ON ROAD

A statistician once took the trouble to perform an autopsy on Klein's batting mark and his findings were that Charlie was slowed down to a .200 clip on the road and galloped at close to a .500 gait at home, where pop flies go for home runs and the rightfielder, forced to play in close enough to catch a cold from the first-sacker, must watch drives that he could easily grab in any other park bang safely off the wall.

So now that "Chuck" is a Cub his critics are satisfied that they have heard the last of him as a clubbing king.

Yet the Cubs have much to gain and little to lose by giving Klein a chance to prove, if he can, that he's the league's best hitter, be where he may. He'll surely hit better than any of the players given for him, if, indeed, he doesn't confound the experts by remaining among the leaders, and he'll still be probably the best defensive flychaser in the loop as well as one of its cleverest base stealers.

It may be that the players to go to Sleepy Town were not decided upon until yesterday but Klein, as Austen Lake, our sports editor, told you exclusively a while back, was Cubs' property weeks ago.

Somebody in Philly made a serious blunder by not officially announcing the fact when the transfer was made, even if it had to be added that the players to be received in exchange would be selected later.

Philly fans were resigned to the sale of their hero at that time. They realized the club needed the money Klein would bring.

Since, they heard the Philly magnates beg them to save their stars by voting for Sunday ball and they obliged. They will not take kindly to this sale so soon after that vote and hundreds will become National League enemies for life.

Report Hafey Traded to Cubs for Malone, Cuyler

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP)—Reports that the Cubs already had completed a deal, whereby Pitcher Pat Malone together with Outfielders Kiki Cuyler and Jim Mosolf would go to the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for Outfielder "Chick" Hafey, were revived today as Cub fans welcomed the acquisition of Charles "Chuck" Klein, one of the greatest left-handed hitters in baseball.

Cub officials denied the deal for Hafey, but reports were that it already had been closed.

FEAR CADETS OVERTRAINED FOR NAVY GO

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP)—With the ground soft and in good playing condition for the first time in two weeks, nearly the entire garrison turned out today to see the Army football squad go through a hard scrimmage in preparation for the Navy game next Saturday. Lieut. Davidson worked the first and second teams both on the attack and defense.

The scrimmage was halted after a few minutes by Davidson because of poor tackling and blocking and the players put back to a hard [illegible] practice on the fundamentals.

When resumed the scrimmage was at full speed with Ralph Bi[illegible]man and Joe Stancook starting in defensive [illegible] up secondaries in Army's 2-2-1 formation.

FEAR TEAM OVERTRAINED

Against the weak B squad opposition, the first backfield composed of Jack Buckler, Joe Stancook, Henry Sebastian and Paul Johnson made many nice gains, but appeared more sluggish than earlier in the season. Fears that the team may be overtrained prevailed among the coaches.

On the reserve eleven, True and Legg were in at fullback and right half respectively.

Although Martz alternated with True and Grove with Legg, Davidson said that he did not expect to use them on Saturday. True is much heavier than Martz although less experienced.

BRUINS SHOW IMPROVEMENT; SET FOR FIRST PLACE WINGS

LEAFS HOWL AT DAIGNEAULT RULING

By BILL GRIMES

Rush right out to a drug store purchase a package of cotton batten and stuff up your ears, for Connie Smythe has at last found cause to go on the air. He will shout at the top of his lungs until such a time as he has convinced all of his listeners that "Busher" Jackson was robbed of a goal and the Maple Leafs were deprived of a legitimate victory over the Rangers.

During the Maple Leaf-Bruin play off in Toronto last spring, Connie thought that Eusebe Daigneault was a great official. But, his present opinion of the Frenchman is unprintable.

With the Leafs and Rangers in a scoreless tie, "Busher" Jackson apparently scored. That is, most of the 13,000 thought he had scored. But, not Mons. Daigneault. According to reports from New York and the boys never give the Rangers the worst of it—Jackson's shot went into the net and bounced out. As it is a risky undertaking Daigneault did not consult the goal judge. Instead, he declared "No Goal."

JOIN "$100 CLUB"

Well, the Maple Leafs went stark mad. Jackson went after the official with such a tirade of forceful protests that he drew a 10-minute misconduct penalty. If Smythe attended the game, and it is safe to predict that he did, he is now a member of the "$100 Club" for 10 times that amount would never deter Connie from having his say under such circumstances.

Then, to cap the climax, the Rangers scored while Jackson was off. Fortunately Andy Blair, combining with Hal Cotton and Charlie Sands put in the equalizer less than two minutes later and the conflict wound up with the teams still deadlocked, after a 10-minute overtime period.

Through a combination of a Chicago defeat by the Bruins and a victory over Ottawa by Detroit the Red Wings moved into first place in the American division. In the International section, the Canadiens broke a three-cornered second-place tie by shutting out Maroons, 5 to 0, and are now only one point behind the Maple Leafs.

One week ago the Bruins looked like so many cripples, while trying to stay with the Red Wings but last night they not only matched the speed of Tommy Gorman's flying Blackhawks but they eked out a 2-to-0 victory.

Strangely enough the game was played before one of the smallest crowds that has ever attended a Bruin game. It was one of the most thrilling games offered in the Garden.

RUGGED BATTLE

From the start it was apparent that the Bruins had been given a fight talk before they went into action. They realized and recognized the Hawks' speed and to offset this handicap they stepped into their opponents at every opportunity. The play was fast and it was also rugged. And the Rossmen held their own in regards to speed and furnished their share of the rugged play.

Vic Ripley scored the first Bruin goal in the opening period. After a face off deep in Hawk territory Harry Oliver drilled a shot at Chuck Gardiner from well outside the defense. Gardiner saved but Johnny Sheppard who must have been sitting in Chuck's lap took a smash at the rebound and again Gardiner managed to deflect the puck to Ripley, who was standing at the post. "Rip" smashed the rubber home.

After the boys had mowed each other down for two more periods Jack Cameron called for a spot face off in front of the Chicago net for a Conacher foul—handling the puck. Dit Clapper scored on a well rehearsed and perfectly executed pass back from Nels Stewart and the game was "in."

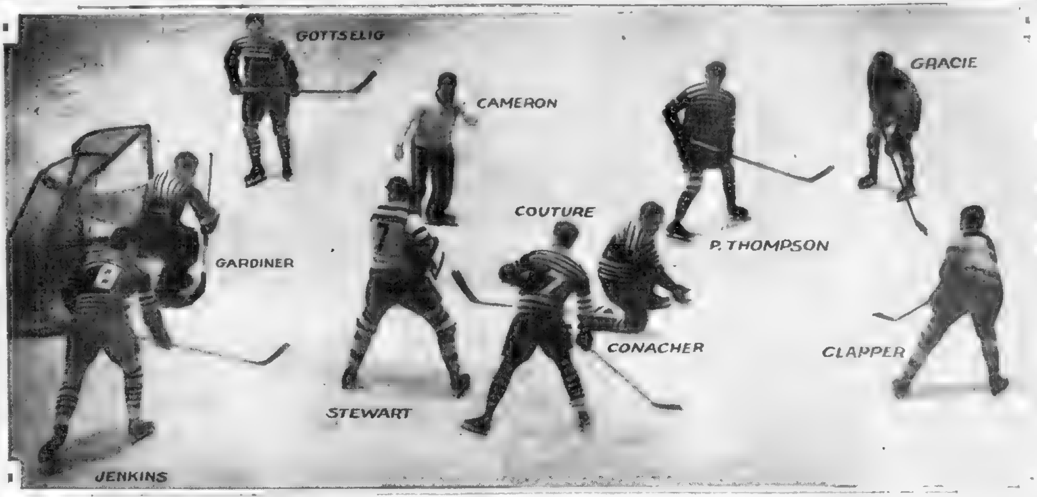
Bruins' Smart Scoring Play -:- -:- Catches Blackhawks Flatfooted



During the training season at Quebec, the Bruins spent hours perfecting a scoring play from a spot face-off. Last night, the Rossmen had their first chance to try their scheme, for in the third period Referee Jack Cameron called for a face-off because Lionel Conacher held the puck in front of his cage.

The secret of the success on this play is that Nels Stewart, instead of making an effort to score simply aided Conacher, who is trying to clear, pass up the ice, knowing that Clapper was in the path of the puck.

The play worked out to perfection. Stewart batted the puck in the same direction that Conacher was shooting and Clapper was exactly in the right position.

Just to demonstrate that they were the masters of that play the Bruins scored twice but the first was recalled as Stewart beat the whistle, which starts the action.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Though I have watched hockey games for many years, I cannot recall any team that showed such marked improvement in a week as the Bruins did last night against the Chicago Blackhawks. In the Detroit game, the Rossmen were practically helpless. They were outskated, out manoeuvered and out-scored. Then, they come back with one of the best exhibitions they have shown at the Garden.

The fans had their first look-see at the new spot face off late last night. In the first period, a spot face off was staged in front of the Boston cage but evidently the Hawks had not practiced the new play. But when it came time for the Bruins to try for a goal from a spot face, they were prepared and Stewart passed back to Clapper who beat Gardiner.

Manager Tommy Gorman has picked up three [illegible] in Jack Leswick, Bill Kendall and Louis Trudell. These [illegible] gave the Bruins [illegible] Gorman's [illegible] combinations and it was [illegible] miracle that they did not score.

There was little to chose between the goal tenders. Tiny Thompson was [illegible] face of a barrage of shots many of which were labeled while Gardiner, although nicked for a couple, was equally as clever.

Bobby [illegible] was not [illegible] Louie Trudell [illegible] the puck which he was holding [illegible] on the ice in front of the Bruin net. Trudell was lucky also. Lucky that he was not flattened [illegible] Dit Clapper and Eddie Shore went after him with a vengeance.

Red Beattie and Art Chapman were stand outs for the Bruins. On the basis of their two games at the Garden Beattie and Chapman are going to enjoy their best season in the N. H. L. Beattie is faster, more shifty and far more dangerous than he has been [illegible] season here while Chapman [illegible] smarter and more [illegible] than ever.

Tommy Gorman is dickering to get Dutch Gainor to join the Blackhawks. Recently Manager Gorman wired Dutch his transportation to the Windy City, but the former Bruin stated that, although he was coming back to the N. H. L., he did not feel that he was ready at present, but that just as soon as he was in condition, he would join the Hawks. Dutch took good care of himself this summer and, if he goes to Chicago, he will be an asset.

Art Ross has been warning Joe Lamb to keep his stick down all season. Frank Patrick has cautioned Manager Ross to restrain the fiery wire. But to no avail. Lamb mixed it up with Paul Thompson to the extent of two penalties in the second period. Then, he erred, for he selected Lionel Conacher as his third period victim and what Connie did to him was just too bad. Joe will be cured some day but it may be too late.

Johnny Gottselig jammed with Eddie Shore in the third period and the Bruin star made a wild swing with his stick at the Hawk which had it reached the mark would have drawn the curtain on Johnny, who brought it on himself by standing on Shore's bad leg.

Perk Galbraith received a warm and from the heart reception from the fans when he made his first appearance of the season with the Bruins. Perk will be a handy man for Manager Ross for he can be used as a left wing or on the defense.

Just as soon as Louie Trudell drew a penalty for [illegible] Eddie Shore out of [illegible] position the Bruins put on the power play. And was Chuck Gardiner a busy goalie? Shore, Lamb, Stewart and Beattie peppered Chuck from all angles and as soon as that [illegible] was [illegible] Oliver, Sheppard and Ripley went after him [illegible] finally Rip scored.

Capt. Chuck Gardiner was not in a very pleasant mood last evening. He "rode" his wings for not checking back, popped Mike Roddy and then skated the length of the ice to protest to Jack Cameron that Tiny Thompson should have been penalized for holding the puck.

It's still a [illegible] to tangle with old man Bill [illegible] Leswick [illegible] in the [illegible] period but [illegible] Hitch could not [illegible] a shot at [illegible] Bill Kendall [illegible]

Dr. Martin Crotty, the Bruin physician and [illegible] night. Dr. Crotty [illegible] from the Bruin [illegible] Hawk [illegible] He put two stitches in Art Coulter's lip [illegible] patching up Couch Gardiner and Joe Lamb.

Manager Art Ross used [illegible] Marty Barry [illegible] contracted a [illegible] on the trip to Montreal and was [illegible] in condition to play for any length of time.

Strong, former [illegible] of New York University, booted the field goal that beat the Chicago Bears last Sunday but Presnell scored seven points to tie the New Yorker for the lead at [illegible] apiece. Jim Musick of Southern California and Boston [illegible] third with 44 and Buckets Goldenberg of Wisconsin and Green Bay fourth with 42.

FITTONS, PERES PLAY AGAIN

The Fittons of East Boston and Pere Marquettes of South Boston will make another attempt to settle the New England semi-pro football championship at Fenway Park next Sunday.

These rivals, whose gridiron feud dates back 13 years, clashed at the Fens a week ago last Sunday but the field was covered with snow and neither could get anywhere, the tilt ending in a scoreless tie.

The Fittons will be strengthened in the coming clash by the return to action of Red Baker, formerly Holy Cross triple-threat and Phil Couhig, former B. C. captain and tackle, who have been on the sidelines with injuries since early in the season.

'Viennese Knights' Bruins Balcony Critic Club

By JOE CASHMAN

The Lamb was finally [illegible] to the slaughter. After running amuck most of the evening our Joseph finally ran [illegible] in a corner guarded by Lionel Conacher, former amateur heavyweight boxing champion and the greatest all-around athlete ever produced in Canada. Result: The Lamb was quickly shorn and ended up in the penalty box sporting a bleeding optic.

It was the first time your envoy had ever seen the claret drawn in one of these hockey brawls. Yet, now that he thinks of it, it was also the first time he had seen anybody daffy enough to risk life and limb swapping punches with big "Connie."

It's a little too late now probably, but Lamb may keep it for future reference. The Hawks trained at Urbana, Ill., and Conacher, not finding enough to do to work up a sweat on the ice, practiced with the Illinois [illegible] squad for good measure. A [illegible] ant little fellow to pick on.

Lamb was the only excuse the keepers of the cooler had for taking their pay. Joe drew all the Bruins' penalties, going off twice with Paul Thompson for high sticking before his faux pas in choosing Conacher as a companion. Jack Trudell, Hawks' rookie forward, drew the only other [illegible] for interference.

Trudell's banishment was another piece of foolishness. He robbed the Bruins of a goal by his foul, but while he was off, the home boys scored anyway, Vic Ripley, a former Hawk, registering.

Visit the press coop at the Garden and be married every time the Bruins or Cubs play. Every Boston goal is a signal for a shower of torn newspaper, elevated transfers, rain checks, cigarette butts and programs from the top gallery. Do those palookas up there ever stop to think that it took some of us guys hours to turn out the classics they are tearing up in seconds and tossing back on our necks?

Those nimcompoops up there might also be interested to know that they don't pay their 40 cents to attend a hockey match. They shell it out to attend "Viennese Knights." Their admission tickets say so. But you can't blame them for not realizing it when they hear the music that the Garden loud speakers grind out.

Verily the sports official is a man without a friend, if not without a country. As though the hockey arbiters didn't have enough trouble, they are now numbered and listed on the program the same as the players so that all the [illegible] may know [illegible] who [illegible] are [illegible] at.

The Hawks looked like typical Chicagoans. March, Gottselig and Jenkins all showed up with patches over the eye and Gardiner entered the class when he caught a puck with his face, while Couture added to the many red circles on the ice when he was hit on the lip and finally returned bandaged.

DAILY ROUNDUP

Manager Connie Smythe of the Toronto Maple Leafs questions Frank Patrick's authority to order the new ice decorations, naming the goal crease and the series of circles.

According to "Trader Horn" Smythe, the board of governors must pass on Patrick's suggestion before it will be official and until such a time, there will be none of the new fangled markings on the ice in the Maple Leaf Gardens.

P. G. A. Lacks Funds to Keep Business Administrator

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP)—Albert R. Gates of Chicago will retire as business administrator of the Professional Golfers Association of America next Jan. 1 and become legal counsel for the organization, it was announced today.

Economic conditions were given as the reason for the withdrawal of Gates from the office as business administrator, which position will be abolished.

"After 35 years of active legal practice and three years as business administrator of the P. G. A., I welcome a chance to get away from heavy duties," Gates said. "While I doubtlessly will be busy in the office as general legal counsel, I will have an opportunity to play some golf and get some fun out of life too. "The Winning of the Championship."

"Bull" Martin says he will occupy the feature role in the above show when he clashes with Pat Fraley of this city in a finish wrestling bout, best two falls out of three, at the Arena tonight.

Fraley was recently crowned New England heavyweight champion at ceremonies staged by Alex MacLean. Martin says he was done a great injustice, and that he will even the score and what not by giving Fraley an artistic licking tonight.

The "Bull" has been installed a slight favorite for tonight's bout. 'Tis natural, as he has been wrecking the opposition in Arena rings for a year. During this time he has attracted 160,000 persons to see him wrestle, which is a lot of people in any nationality.

Fraley has knocked off some first class opposition, and says he will tame the "Bull." And prove he is merely an alley cat. A rather nasty crack on the part of Fraley. He may regret it once the "Bull" sees "red" this p. m.

Kewpie Kilroy of Roxbury, who studied the higher arts at Boston College, will try to toss Al Mercier of Montreal in the semifinal. Kilroy is a rugged youth, and should go places in the mat game.

"Baron" Ginsberg himself will appear in a special bout. He will have Al Peckham of Dorchester as an opponent.

Viewing it in this light, it may be noted that magazine and newspaper advertising actually reflect [illegible] in business taking place during the years 1930, 1931 [illegible] should also be noted [illegible] advertising [illegible] on the whole a more accurate barometer of business [illegible] The index of newspaper advertising has dropped [illegible] head of and [illegible] than magazine advertising [illegible] the present year.

PRICE FIXING IN OIL INDUSTRY PROVES HARD

'Not Below Cost' Rule of Some; Difficult Task, Says Haney

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor Economics, New York University

New York, Nov. 22—As I had anticipated, price fixing for the oil industry is proving a tough nut to crack. In few industries would it be more difficult to make even a start at price fixing.

Perhaps, therefore, it is fortunate the first problem that government price fixers have tackled is this one. It may stump them and save us from the eventual failure of such experiments. So far the price fixing clauses in the codes are more or less shams. They merely amount to giving the industries power to violate the anti-trust laws by making price agreements.

For example, the copper interests are proposing in their code to name no definite price or even any definite basis for fixing a price. They merely propose to empower a selected group to name some price from time to time.

* * *

Other codes [illegible] prescribe that prices shall not be below cost, or that there shall be some specified [illegible] But this is extremely indefinite. No one knows what the cost is.

But the oil plan moves [illegible] a schedule of refinery minimum prices [illegible] Now Secretary Ickes [illegible] that the schedule will be postponed till Jan. 1 and there is a fair chance that this may mean the end of the scheme.

Price fixing always [illegible] trouble. A while back it was the government which as a buyer was objecting to the price fixed by the cement interests. Then it was the government that sought to break the price fixed by [illegible]

* * *

Now the government itself has announced prices to be fixed for [illegible] and its products, and we find hundreds of others [illegible]

Small "independents" and big integrated companies alike are objecting. And [illegible] objected that a Pittsburgh oil man who is on the government's oil advisory committee would make so much money under the proposed high prices that he would soon recoup his big income tax deficit and his contributions of political campaign funds.

You see there are always different and conflicting interests involved, and these are so complicated and so changing that no wise man would attempt the role of price fixer.

Buyers want low prices and sellers want high prices. Some oil men produce only crude oil. Others produce only gasoline and fuel oil. Others only market gasoline and [illegible] Others do all these things. Their interests in the various products are very different.

State St. Spirits Droop Under Lash of Adverse News

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State Street spirits no sooner started to pick up than adverse news breaks together with market action, lashed them into submission. First the rails faltered at the very threshold of the bull domain, when the hourly releases could not make 40¼, after coming within less than a quarter of a point of that objective price. The alcohols, widely held and just as widely tipped for a fresh spurt, laid down and died.

As though this were not enough, Prof. Sprague decided the time for his resignation had arrived. It may be that everything that has happened is coincidence. But to our mind it is a tribute to the [illegible] The ironical [illegible] of confirmation was not fulfilled. The [illegible] did not come up [illegible] entire move [illegible] in great danger of petering out.

DANGER POINTS ARE NOTED

Maybe our admonition above to look for signs that the up move is all done is over-pessimistic. But we find good, keen observers ready to abandon the bull cause if the industrials break 98 and the rails [illegible] Both [illegible] course. This [illegible] the dial averages were [illegible] at least a temporary down trend.

Notes: The dire forecast of Prof. Sprague may enthuse inflation [illegible] bulls. But the harm it will do to business sentiment is more than [illegible] offset [illegible] Consequently those with a long position cannot be blamed if they are somewhat jittery. And recently formed bull pools are decidedly on the defensive from now on.

The subtle criticism of the gold-buying policy by Prof. Sprague comes close to scoffing. It is going to have its effect. Certainly the market is not likely to follow sterling fluctuations when a renowned authority says it is practically a lot of bunkam.

Power Output for Week Again Higher

Output of electricity for the week ended Nov. 18 registered the [illegible] the corresponding period of 1932 [illegible] 5.6 per cent [illegible] 6.3 per cent a week [illegible] week has been larger than for the [illegible] of 1932.

President Roosevelt has one quality, one characteristic, one possession which is priceless under existing foggy conditions: Optimism, cheerfulness, faith.

Never once has he exhibited publicly the slightest doubt in his ability, in the nation's ability, to lick depression and restore prosperity.

PRICE CHANGES FOR LEADERS ARE MIXED

New York, Nov. 22 — Price changes ran mixed for leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange today. Most variations from yesterday's finish were narrow.

In the last hour alcohols were under moderate pressure, while metals improved. Industrial leaders were narrow and rails a trifle mixed.

American Telephone and U. S. Steel were about steadq, but firmness was shown by Nash Motors, McIntyre and U. S. Smelting.

The dollar was a trifle firmer in foreign exchange dealings, as the RFC failed to increase its gold price today. By afternoon, the pound sterling ruled around $5.41, off a cent from yesterday's close.

Federal bond issues lost ¼ to 31-32 of one point—a point representing $1 per $100 par value. A few issues reached new lows for the year. The listed market for the federal issues, it was explained, is usually a thin market, and a large part of the dealings in these issues are through private transactions.

In the first hour, after an irregularly higher start, some issues sagged one to three points. Selling was not heavy and support was evident.

American Commercial Alcohol lost more than 3 points. Schenley lowered more than 2 points and National Distillers was off over a point.

American Smelting, U. S. Smelting and McIntyre Porcupine showed gains of a point or better. Homestake Mining sagged 15 points. Delaware & Hudson dipped 2 points. Atlantic Coast Line, Union Pacific and Baltimore & Ohio were down a point or more. Air Reduction and Eastman were higher.

Sales at 11 a. m. approximated 510,000 shares.

In the second hour alcohols reduced their losses and a number of specialties moved up for net gains. Safeway Stores and Du Pont were around 2 points higher by noon.

Mack was up two and Norfolk & Western four points higher. Libbey-Owens, Johns-Manville, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman, Case, Celanese, American Woolen pfd. and American Smelting and Allied Chemical added a point or more. U. S. Smelting was up over two points.

Gains dominated third hour trading. Collins & Aikman and U. S. Smelting were up over two points. Point or better gains showed for Pacific Lighting, McIntyre, Ingersoll-Rand, Johns-Manville, Goodyear, Industrial Rayon, American Smelting, Byers, Case, Allied Chemical, Alaska Juneau and others.

Gains of two or better appeared for Air Reduction, Safeway and du Pont, while Eastman Kodak mounted three points.

Moderately higher prices ruled in the fourth hour with some issues running up gains of as much as three points. Eastman Kodak and U. S. Smelting had gains of three points.

Air Reduction and Celanese were up two points at one time. Point or better gains appeared for such issues as Alaska Juneau, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Case Threshing, Goodyear and McIntyre Porcupine. Homestake Mining was down 15 points.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 1,240,000 shares.

Oil Operations in Week Move Higher

In the week ended Nov. 18 operations at oil refineries increased over preceding week, when the rate was the lowest since last April, American Petroleum Institute reports. Crude oil runs to stills averaged 2,196,000 barrels daily, an operating rate of 65.7 per cent for plants representing 92.4 per cent of capacity, against 2,084,000 daily or 62.3 per cent the week ended Nov. 11.

Grains End Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP)—A late outburst of selling today more than wiped out the effect of rallies from early sharp setbacks of wheat values. Wheat closed nervous, 1¼-1⅜ cents under yesterday's finish, corn ⅛-⅝ off, oats ½-⅞ down, and provisions showing 5 to 40 cents decline.

Closing Prices in Wool Market Are Up

Variety Store Sales in Month Show Gains

Washington, Nov. 22—Preliminary estimates of retail sales through variety stores (5 and 10 cent to one-dollar) show an increase of 5.9 per cent for the month of October as compared with October, 1932, according to Dr. Willard L. Thorp, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

An increase of 4.8 per cent over September of this year is also shown and is similar to the seasonal increase recorded during the past two years but less than is normally expected in October.

The percentages given above are based on average daily sales so computed as to eliminate the effect of differences in the number of working days in the several months, and the varying sales importance of the several days of the week.

These estimates of variety store sales are based upon figures furnished by a co-operating group of chain organizations, and represent stores continuously in operation since 1929. Consequently they reflect changes in the value of consumer purchases from this type store, rather than expansion or decline in the scope of the chains included. The sales of the reporting organizations represent more than three-fourths of the business done in this field.

October, 1929	+ 9.3	......
October, 1930	+10.1	— 8.0
October, 1931	+ 4.3	— 9.7
October, 1932	+ 5.5	—12.2
October, 1933	+ 4.8	+ 5.9

LET FREEDOM RING

These are days of trial and error, when every citizen has up his sleeve a liquor control plan which will immediately do away with the bootlegger and the speakeasy—as well as make it extremely difficult to get a drink. And in such times, we say, the ideas of Simore G. Horsfall, the well-known liberal, are as refreshing as a winterie blast. "Why can't we be broad-minded about the situation?" snaps Horsfall. "As for me, I see no reason why any man should not be served cocktails in a reputable restaurant. So long as, to discourage overindulgence, he is required to first consume a thick slab of apple pie smothered with whipped cream."

Horsfall also advocated that the restaurants be allowed to freely serve champagne to those customers who are eating ham and eggs at the time.

Roosevelt's Humane Civil Works Program to Quicken Industrial Recovery

AS ITS objectives are disclosed, President Roosevelt's Civil Works Program—designed as it is to put 4,000,000 men to work at a living wage before thirty days have passed—shows itself more and more worthy of wholehearted approbation.

When the program was first announced the Hearst newspapers found it gratifying to give the proposal their enthusiastic support, and to pay to the President himself the respect and praise that his courage and vigor deserved—and these sentiments have been confirmed and strengthened by Mr. Roosevelt's address at the White House on Wednesday last to Governors, Mayors and State and city relief officials.

In the earliest onset of the depression the Hearst newspapers became outstanding advocates of a comprehensive Public Works Program as the key to national economic recovery.

Their recommendation of a five-billion-dollar unemployment relief appropriation received the immediate approval of a large number of authorities in sociological, economic, industrial and political fields of thought.

Under a reactionary Republican Administration, however, little or nothing could be accomplished. President Hoover scoffed at the idea of a five-billion-dollar Prosperity Loan, and the jobless and dispossessed were left to the scanty ministrations of private charity, while Government pursued the fatuous policy of "pouring money in at the top"—as if human suffering could be relieved and stagnant trade revitalized by "unfreezing" ill-advised speculative loans and allowing bankers to hoard up vast reserves of idle money.

* * *

UNDER the Hoover leadership even Garner's billion-dollar proposal was cut down to an utterly futile figure.

So it required the election of a Roosevelt and a Democratic Administration to change this heartless Federal attitude.

The new President started immediately in the right direction by procuring work-relief appropriations of three and a half billions of dollars from a sympathetic Congress. The sum in itself was not sufficient for the nation's requirement, but it was large enough to get diversified public projects going, and progress has been made—howbeit slowly.

It is to take up the slack in this Federal Public Works Program that the President has instituted the Civil Works Program, dispensing at a stroke with red tape and technical delays and demanding the utmost speed.

In this the President heeds again his own common sense motto, "Put first things first"—for certainly there is no public task more peremptory than sparing to as great a number of our citizens as possible the bitter privations and despair of another jobless Winter and the un-American humiliations of the dole system.

* * *

INDEED, since the depression began the important thing and the effective thing for the Government to do has been to relieve unemployment directly as fast as it can, and thereby to stimulate private industry so that industry can in turn reabsorb all unemployment.

And the Government must and should lead in re-employment efforts.

Any attempt to compel industry to relieve unemployment before industry is able to do so is merely to retard industrial recovery, and actually to prevent industry from reaching the point where it can properly and permanently provide general employment.

The President's Civil Works Program is, of course, to be administered as a relief measure—it contemplates employing 2,000,000 jobless persons and re-employing 2,000,000 others now receiving less than subsistence wages. At once, with their families and dependents, perhaps 15,000,000 persons will be helped over the Winter.

But an employment program on such a scale must necessarily have its effects and be measured in economic terms as well as humanitarian.

* * *

SUCH a program, consistently carried through, points definitely to industrial recovery. For by the time the three-months' emergency program is ended the President expects that vast projects under the permanent Public Works Program will have reached the pick and shovel stage, and these projects with reinvigorated private enterprise will provide other new jobs needed.

Two points in the President's address of Wednesday emphasized both the economic and the humanitarian features of the plan. Toward hastening the recovery process, the President urged the State representatives to proceed with all speed—"speed," he commented, "is essential." And he adjured the local representatives to avoid any suspicion of politics.

"I would like the general rule adopted," he said, "that no person connected with the administration of this $4,000,000,000 will in any single case . . . ask whether a person needing relief or work is a Republican, Democrat, Socialist or anything else."

* * *

ALL in all, President Roosevelt has proceeded in a manner to gratify and encourage his countrymen.

Under his leadership the Federal Government has been energized into meeting the inevitable human problems of an economic depression in a civilized way.

After long useless debate and heart sickening delays the country has happily at length reached the stage of swift and constructive action.

Beauty in Hollywood

Lord Northcliffe once said that the man who did not like automobiles was the man who did not have one.

The idea back of that remark can be applied to many exhibitions of intolerance, notably to Mr. Penrhyn Stanlaws' latest strabismic attack upon the women of Hollywood.

Mr. Stanlaws is convinced that they are not beautiful.

He is convinced that the people of the United States, and the people of the rest of the world, who really decide such matters by exercise of their preferences, are wrong and that he, Mr. Stanlaws, is right.

He is like the man in the marching regiment who felt sure that everybody was out of step but himself. They were merely out of step with himself.

The real reason Mr. Stanlaws does not like the folk who have jobs in Hollywood is that he has not got a job in Hollywood.

He came to Hollywood once upon a time to direct pictures, and got a position as director for a year.

He thought Hollywood was a wonderful place then, and that the men were fine and the women beautiful.

At the end of the year Mr. Stanlaws had not clicked as a director, and putting the situation brutally, was fired; whereupon Hollywood became a despicable place, where the men were unworthy and unwise and unappreciative of true genius, and where the women were no longer beautiful.

The man who does not like automobiles, said Lord Northcliffe, is the man who has not got one.

And the man who does not like Hollywood is the man who wants a job there and cannot get one.

Roosevelt Facing Test With New Congress

By James T. Williams, Jr.

When Congress reconvenes on January 3—six weeks hence—the legislative leadership of the President, as the titular leader of the party in power, will be put to a severe test.

His Republican opponents have begun to organize a minority leadership in both Houses that will subject every executive recommendation for legislation to a most critical examination.

This means that Mr. Roosevelt must largely depend for the enactment at the next session of his legislative program upon the support of Democratic Senators and Representatives in Congress and upon the co-operation of those Progressive Republicans who "put the cause above renown" and have little respect for party discipline.

The chief danger to the Roosevelt program which will be submitted at the next session of Congress lies in the chaotic condition of the Democratic party in the House. Its majority in that body will be more than 190. This is far too large a majority to be effectively organized except when wisely and strongly led.

There was no such leadership of the House during the extra session which convened immediately after Inauguration Day. The Speaker found himself shorn of most of his power and the leader of the majority inaugurated his so-called "leadership" by declining to introduce the President's chief economy measure.

THE NEXT CONGRESS

All through the session, Mr. Roosevelt had to rely upon what was left of the organization built up under the speakership of Mr. Garner to enact the Roosevelt measures. The nominal leaders of the House found it difficult to control their majority.

When Congress reconvenes, much of the patronage at the disposal of the President will have been distributed. The administration will no longer be "on its honeymoon." The Republican opposition will be organized and functioning. Blocs of special interests will swamp the Capitol with their lobbyists. The situation in the House will imperil the President's legislative program unless a leadership in that body can be raised up that will reinforce and, when necessary, over-ride the nominal leaders of the last session who time and again were tried and found wanting.

This means a drawing in the House of Progressive representatives under leadership of their own choosing. Their objective will be the maintenance of a majority that believes in the President's Recovery Program and will fight for its enactment from a sense of conviction instead of from fear of party discipline or lust for political patronage.

THE MEASURES

In view of what the President must face at the next session of Congress, the wiser and more experienced of his advisers will urge upon him the necessity of submitting to Congress specific recommendations for specific legislation, and following this up by having leaders of his own choice introduce the measures which he believes to be essential to complete his recovery program.

These measures are expected to include: (1) A new banking bill designed to unify under federal control the banking system of the country; (2) A pure food and drug bill to make effective existing legislation passed by Congress during the administration of the first President Roosevelt and now badly in need of revision; (3) A transportation act to extend federal control over holding companies and to subject all forms of transportation to the same regulation and control that the Interstate Commerce Commission has long provided for the railroads.

Wrestling Killing Business

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—I had no idea wrestling had become the brutal affair it is until watching a recent bout. In other days the tugging and straining were fierce enough but there was always a suspicion of fakery. There can be no deception about the newer method. It's a killing business.

O. O. McIntyre

They take running jumps, head and feet first, into each other's midriffs. Heads are crashed with all the force of thrown bodies against the floor. They are hurled into audience laps. I saw one wrestler reel, his arms drop while his nightmare mind tried to grapple with a flicker of reality.

As he stood in an egg-peeled-white daze, his opponent raced the length of the ring and sailed head first into the pit of his stomach. He sagged with an agonized oof while both lay prostrate and possibly wandering through some field rich with posies. Finally they crawled toward each other like dying gladiators.

They slug, they foul, they even bite. There appears to be not a single rule of decent sportsmanship. The victor staggered to his feet with effort at a swollen smile while groping into the obscurity of a yelling crowd. The vanquished was carried out on a stretcher. And many of us sicken at bullfights.

One of the staunchest of the editorial shop loyalties was expressed by the late newspaper artist, Morris Aleshire. Before his banking days, George Buckley and Aleshire were "tenting under the same rag"—a Chicago paper. While Buckley was making his remarkable recovery from a 22 months' strapped-to-a-board illness, Aleshire profusely illustrated a six-page letter to him daily, mailed it to his hospital and doubled the ante on Sunday. Doctors agreed this diurnal dose of cheerfulness had much to do with the astounding comeback.

Charles M. Schwab has long been one of the earliest risers along Riverside Drive, a custom he acquired in puddler days and which he never forsook. The few wayfarers who pass his mansion at 6:30 a. m. are likely to see him strolling about his lawn or wandering to the river edge to toss chips therein for his big police dog to retrieve.

* * *

Mrs. Schwab, lovely, silver-haired and enduring with fortitude an affliction that keeps her mostly in her chair, was proudest—among all the golden wedding gifts received—of the duplicate of her wedding ring Mr. Schwab gave her. The original ring was a plain gold band modestly flecked with garnets and two small diamonds. It epitomized large slices of self-sacrificing thrift in his struggling-up days.

When Elmer Davis, the writer, returned from his Rhodes scholarship at Oxford, he set out in quest of a literary job. In those days as in these he found the path of the novitiate rocky. In despair one morning he turned to the want ads and saw a distinguished gentleman wanted a tutor for his son—a tutor who was "a Harvard man, a high churchman, and an athlete." Davis happened to be not one of these but he got the job.

Our 'Silent' Police

Swampscott policemen have been put under gag rule. Any officers who criticize a fellow officer or the town officials will be dismissed peremptorily. Nothing new in that. From the way police have acted during the murder epidemic it would seem they are not only gagged but handcuffed as well.

Kemal Pasha, Defier of European Powers, Celebrates Tenth Birthday as Turkish Dictator

By Edwin C. Hill

Scarcely more than a decade ago, a sandy-haired, gray-eyed, cold-blooded young man told the Powers of Europe to go to the devil and take their treaty with them. Instead, they went after him and the remnants of a beaten army which he had gathered around him.

But like the little corporal from Corsica, the sandy-haired young man with the hypnotic gray eyes turned out to be a man of destiny. The statesmen, the politicians and the intriguers of the Continent soon had enough of him and were glad to let him alone. Then, he laid aside his sword and went to work building a modern republic out of an ancient Mohammedan kingdom. And while he was tackling this tremendous job in transforming the political and social customs of a country, he danced continuously and played poker with the skill of a Southern congressman.

10TH ANNIVERSARY

And now Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Turkish dictator, celebrates the tenth anniversary of the republic which he created. The cannon boom and millions parade. But there are no veiled women peering from barred windows. One of Mustapha Kemal's most sensational strokes of reform was his liberation of women from the veils, the harems and the seclusion of Moslem tradition.

"Show your faces to the world and look the world in the face," he told them, and almost instantly a million women discarded the veils of custom. They were having their first look at a strange, startling, fascinating world. Women of the upper classes, who had thrilled behind their latticed windows, to romantic fiction, now found the opportunity to be the heroines of their own love affairs.

Marriages decreased, divorces increased. Turkish ladies went on an emotional spree for years, with motion pictures, French dresses and all the rest of the newly acquired toys and customs and sports of foreign countries. Millions went to France for champagnes, Paris frocks, perfumes and lipsticks. The society women of Istanbul and Angora became the best dressed women in Europe, the most skillful dancers and the most enthusiastic cocktail drinkers. For years there was a gay whirl and a grand merry-go-round of flirtation, fox trotting, poker playing and cocktail drinking, while the suddenly liberated ladies had their fling.

But they're settling down now to education and to work. Many women have become noted professors, lawyers and writers. The woman banker, Hatije Hanim, is known throughout the Near East.

The man who is responsible for all this, the Ghazi, the dictator, is one of the strong men of the age, and one of the most interesting personalities alive. Unlike Hitler and Mussolini, he works almost in silence, saying little, showing himself in public almost never.

EYES PENETRATING

His hair is fair and his eyes are a blue-gray, singularly penetrating. He is very well read and likes to talk. He has his clothes made by a famous European tailor and takes much pains with his dress. On official occasion he is punctilious in his devotion to formal attire. He is extremely fond of dancing and his knowledge of draw poker has surprised several Americans who put their feet under the table with him.

* * *

Tall, slim, white-haired Adm. William Sowden Sims, U. S. N., retired, always speaking his mind in uniform or out, thinks we had better build a few hundred more first rate fighting planes. Whatever Admiral Sims says is worth listening to.

Always tart in his remarks and sometimes a bit captious, the handsome and distinguished old sea-fighter, with his neat, pointed beard and his keen blue eyes, was an obscure young captain in the Navy when he first drew the attention of President Roosevelt by his blunt statement that the Navy's shooting was so bad that it couldn't hit a barndoor from the inside. Roosevelt called Captain Sims to the White House, shot questions at him and the result was an improvement in naval marksmanship that put American naval gunners in the front rank of experts.

When the World War came along, Admiral Sims was placed in command of our battleships abroad. The Allies gave him a suitcase full of medals and decorations, but for some reason he rejected the Distinguished Service Medal of his own country. He possesses more foreign decorations probably than any other American except Colonel Lindbergh, General Pershing and Owen D. Young.

PLANES GREAT WEAPON

Now, at seventy-five, he lives happily and speaks out vigorously in his retirement at Newport, Rhode Island. Many of his sharp remarks have made the first pages. Here's his comment on international politics:

"No nation, as a nation, is respectable. They're all trying to get what they want. If they can get it by power or threat of power, they will. This includes the United States."

The airplanes will be the great naval weapon of the future, Admiral Sims believes, putting it this way: "The airplane carrier is the battleship of the future, but the Naval Board doesn't know it." And about Annapolis he made this barbed comment: "The United States Naval Academy is the forat school in the world."
